WHITE HOUSE RECEIVES MELLON REPORT

Announcement That Accord Impends Follows Phone Conversation With Paris

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(AP.)—The hope and expectation that a Franco-American reparations agreement would be reached before nightfall was expressed by American officials today after a telephone conversation with Secretary Mellon, in Paris.

No amplification of the expression was given.

The conversation, unlike most of those which have gone before, was carried on from the executive offices at the White House with Acting Secretaries Castle, of the State Department, and Mills, of the Treasury, and Chairman Meyer, of the Federal Reserve Board, participating.

The President was absent from the room while they discussed with Secretary Mellon the latest developments. He talked over his plan for a war debt suspension with the cabinet at its regular meeting, which was under way while the telephone conversation was going on.

After its adjournment, one cabinet officer said the President was "very much happier over the outlook than he was a week ago."

One official, who has been close to the negotiators, said he expected the remaining differences between the French and American views would be smoothed away before tonight. No definite announcement was looked for, however, until the conference between French and American officials in Paris late today.

France Hopes to Give U. S. Fourth of July Present

PARIS, July 3.—(INS.)—The French government hopes to commemorate the Fourth of July, America's national holiday, by announcing to the people of the United States a complete accord on the Hoover moratorium proposal.

International News Service was informed by a high authoritative source that France is extremely anxious to celebrate the occasion by a complete agreement on the proposal for a war debts and reparations holiday.

Today

Around the World in 8 Days.
Two Speeches in 3 Words.
Lindbergh Was There.
And Other Great Fliers.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IF YOU HAD been alive on the day after Christopher Columbus discovered America, you would have talked about nothing less important, for at least 24 hours.

This is written on the day after Post and Gatty landed from a flight around the world in 8 days 15 hours and 51 minutes. It seems not worth while to talk about other things.

THE LUNCHEON given to the two great fliers yesterday by Mayor Walker, of New York, would have interested you. At a high table, with many flowers and three enormous United States flags in the rear, sat the Mayor, with Post, the pilot, on his right, and Gatty, the navigator, on his left, with Dr. Finley to do the erudite introducing.

Post, who piloted the ship the whole way around, which means that he spent nine days with little sleep, is a short man, with thick, tousled hair, broad shoulders, high cheekbones, so modest that the violet, in comparison, would seem like a charging, two-horned rhinoceros.

IT WAS a gathering worth while that the Mayor brought together.

There should have been another Macaulay on hand to describe it.

At a table in front of the world conquerors sat one lady in a big blue hat. That was Mrs. Post. Near her sat another one in a little white hat. That was Mrs. Gatty. Unless you have seen a mother cat watch its kitten kill its first mouse, you can't imagine how proud they looked.

Paul Block, who is a competent judge, said:

"It must have been hard to fly away from those two lovely ladies."

They are, indeed, both beautiful.

ANOTHER YOUNG female person, in a white hat, was at the same table. The expression on her face changed more rapidly than the inside of a kaleidoscope.

She laughed with absolute sincerity at every joke, good or bad, made by Mayor Walker or Dr. Finley, and she almost cried, in her embarrassment, when Mayor Walker said pleasant things about her. That was Elinor Smith, the girl flier.

THERE WAS another table, with men only, that you would have studied with interest.

One man, 6 feet 3 inches high, with light blue eyes, was obviously trying to make himself look four feet high and attract no attention. That was Lindbergh. Only one Christopher Columbus, only one Lindbergh. On his left was Casey Jones, and next that fine pilot Bernt Balchen, who has never had all the credit he deserves for his flight to the North Pole.

There was Fitzmaurice, the Irishman who flew here with the Bremen, and there was Chamberlin, that flew the Atlantic when flying that ocean was a novelty.

Also present were Kent Cooper, of the Associated Press, and Paul Block, who owns many papers. Their business is to let the world know about it, after it has been done.

GATTY, SKILLFUL navigator, who directed the flight, "sitting back at my ease," as he put it in paying tribute to Post, is a rather thin, tall, very blond, highly intelligent young man, with a high forehead.

Post is an American, who started in Texas, moved to Oklahoma, then suddenly moved around the world. His ancestors were Scotch, and came to this country by way of Ireland, as many others have done. Gatty is an Australian.

Dr. Finley observed that an American navigator took Kingsford-Smith on his great flight, and now a British navigator took the American pilot, Wiley Post, on his flight.

MR. POST'S flying career proves that difficulties can be overcome.

When he applied for a pilot's license the government said: "You can't fly." Mr. Post, you must know, has only one real eye. The other is glass.

Post replied:

"In that case, I have been fooling myself for 700 hours."

He had flown 700 hours, by himself, and when he proved it, they gave him a pilot's license. They made no mistake.

MEN THAT DO things use few words.

Cromwell in 24 words described his conquest and pacification of Ireland.

Post and Gatty on landing used only three words for two radio speeches.

Post, who knew that his wife was listening, said: "Hello." That was all of his speech, and it was all for her.

Gatty, who knew that his children were listening, said: "Hello, kids." That was all of his speech.

THEIR "FORMAL talks" at luncheon yesterday were almost as brief. Post talked a minute and a half, thanked Gatty for his fine navigating; Mr. Hall, of Oklahoma, for financing the trip, Mayor Walker for his luncheon and all the people on

EX-PITT STAR NAMED ON BOARD

Writer One of Original Commission Created in State to Direct Sports

HARRISBURG, July 3.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today effected a reorganization of the State Athletic Commission by reappointing Harry T. Farrel, Nanticoke, naming him chairman of the new commission, and dismissing Frank Weiner, Philadelphia, former chairman, and Havey Boyle, Pittsburgh.

Coincident with the retention and advancement of Farrell, the governor announced that Dr. W. D. McClelland, of Pittsburgh, had been appointed to succeed Boyle as Western Pennsylvania's representative.

The new member, to be chosen from Philadelphia or Eastern Pennsylvania, will be named later, the Governor said.

The State Athletic Commission legally has been out of office since May 28, but had been functioning and has been paid since that time.

Dr. W. D. McClelland, 2400 Arlington avenue, who was appointed successor to Havey J. Boyle as a member of the State Athletic Commission, is a former University of Pittsburgh and Central High School football star, having played under three of the greatest coaches in this vicinity. He was an all-scholastic backfield star at Central High School in 1911, 1912 and 1913 under the leadership of Andy Kerr. He was a member of three undefeated University of Pittsburgh football teams during the seasons of 1915, 1916 and 1917, being a regular on Pop Warner's teams. During the season of 1918, when college football was suspended due to the war, McClelland was a star on Dr. John

HEAT WAVE UNBROKEN BY RAIN

New Showers Promised to Herald Fair, Cool July 4; Death Toll Here Is 13

Temperatures tumbled last night and today as rain brought welcome relief to Pittsburgh and its environs. The Weather Bureau readings were:

(Eastern Daylight Time.)

Midnight	73	9 a. m.	75
1 a. m.	74	10 a. m.	77
2 a. m.	74	11 a. m.	82
3 a. m.	73	Noon	85
4 a. m.	71	11 a. m.	82
5 a. m.	71	Noon	85
6 a. m.	71	1 p. m.	87
7 a. m.	71	2 p. m.	88
8 a. m.	73

While murky clouds, promising hourly to give the cooling thundershowers forecast by the Weather Bureau, hung on the outskirts of the city, Pittsburgh's temperature raced steadily upward this afternoon accompanied by a close, oppressive atmosphere.

Severe storms late yesterday sent the temperature down to 71 during the early hours this morning, but at 10 a. m. it started an upward climb.

A five-degree jump between 10 and 11 o'clock placed the mercury at 82. From there it progressed steadily until at 2 p. m. the Weather Bureau reported 88, still nine degrees below yesterday's high of 97, which set a summer's record and came within two points of equaling that of 1930.

At 3 o'clock the sun was shining brightly downtown, although storm clouds still hovered nearby and the rumble of thunder could be heard at intervals. The thermometers responded by rising to 89.

The humidity registered 59 per cent, only two points below that of yesterday, Weather Bureau officials said.

MORE RAIN PROMISED

The thunder showers which Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said would reach the city by mid-afternoon or evening, were expected to bring material relief and clear away in time to allow a fair and cool holiday.

Thirteen person died during the past 24 hours of the heat wave.

Odds at Cleveland Swing to Schmeling As Throngs Gather

Heavyweight Battle Expected to Be Box Office Flop.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

CLEVELAND, July 3.—The zero hour is almost at hand, and Cleveland finally has taken on the semblance of a heavyweight championship boxing scene.

The hustling, bustling fans are here, gathered from near and far, to witness a 15-round battle in the spacious new Stadium tonight between Max Schmeling, of Germany, the champion, and Young Stribling, of Georgia, the challenger.

It is a crowd such as the one that drifted into Toledo 11 years ago to see beetle-browed young Jack Dempsey topple the giant Jess Willard from the throne. By that we mean to convey the impression that it is somewhat different from the sophisticated and blase mobs that turn out for such affairs in the bigger centers, like New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. It is a fight for the "yokels," so called—the folks in the "sticks" of the fight game.

The weather bureau predicted "continually and occasional cloudy" weather and explained that this might or might not mean showers. And if it does rain, it may be a brief shower.

RECEIPTS MAY BE SMALL

Most of the crowd that will be spread out in apron fashion around the lighted center of the new sports plant will be from the immediate vicinity. It is coming in from the small towns over a radius of several hundred miles. True, the regulars, who never miss a heavyweight bout of import-

Water Main Geyser Floods Home, Rouses Sleepers

Routed from their slumbers about dawn today when their home was flooded, the family of A. Rosenberger, 125 Noblestown road, Scott Township, discovered the deluge was due to a broken water main.

From the break the water spurted 25 feet into the air, they reported, breaking windows in their house and flowing into the rooms.

Repeated calls to the police, they said, brought no response. Rosenberger declared the officers told him that as the main was on a private right of way between his home and the adjoining one, it was not under their jurisdiction. A call to the South Pittsburgh Water Company brought an end to the deluge.

She has been unable to leave her room for five years. She reads the Sun-Telegraph every day with the aid of a magnifying glass. Of the world fliers, she said:

"They're welcome to their trip. I wouldn't fly even if I were young."

Miss Cox and her sister, Mrs. Emma Watson, remember Pittsburgh when Fifth avenue was called the Fourth street road and horsecars were in vogue. They said:

"We used to go skating on flooded vacant lots on Forbes street. The Mercy Hospital was only one-story high. When the old arsenal exploded we thought the 'rebs' were coming."

Their father ran The Plowman up the Monongahela River nearly a century ago. The sisters believe in temperance rather than prohibition. Miss Cox said:

RATES ON STEEL FROM SOUTH UNCHANGED

I. C. C. Refuses Petition Of Carriers; Lake Cargo Case Under Advisement

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(AP.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today refused to permit railroads to increase rates on iron and steel products from Birmingham and other southern points to Eastern New England and Buffalo-Pittsburgh territories.

The southern rates are lower than the rest of the country. The railroads sought to increase them to the level of other sections. The commission said:

"It is undoubtedly true that the present rates from the South to the North are a result of market competition, but the fact in itself is no proof that such rates may be lawfully increased and more particularly by abrupt increases such as are here proposed which would do serious violence to a legitimate business."

The commission concluded hearing arguments today on the latest effort of northern bituminous coal operators to increase rate differentials between northern and southern fields on shipments for lake cargo trade.

The commission took the case under advisement.

Operators from Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee closed the hearings with pleas against any change in the present spread of rates between the two sections. They contended an increase in the 35 cent per ton higher rate paid by them since 1928 would result in irreparable damage to the industry in that area.

The northern group, comprising companies in Pennsylvania and Ohio said an advance of at least 10 cents per ton in the differential was necessary if they were to maintain competition with the southern companies.

Counsel for West Virginia operators, grouped in the case with the southern companies, requested their section be divorced from the south and considered a part of the Western Pennsylvania area. Such a change would remove the present differential of 23 cents against them.

COAL MEN WAIT CALL BY U. S.

Coal operators of the Pittsburgh district today were awaiting invitations to the conference called by the United States Department of Commerce on stabilization of the bituminous industry, before making known their attitude toward the meeting.

According to word from Washington, Secretary Lamont has declined to reveal the companies invited to the conference.

P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, lauded the conference as a step toward putting the coal business on a sound basis that would provide a profit for the operators and a decent wage for the miners.

The National Miners Union, so-called radical organization, denounced the plan as a move to place the "whole coal industry into the hands of the great coal companies." This group has called a national conference to meet in Pittsburgh, July 15 and 16, it was announced from the headquarters, 611 Penn avenue.

MORE EVIDENCE BEING SOUGHT IN CITY QUIZ

Auditors Believed to Have Discovered Vital Data in Scanning Bank Accounts

Important information having been obtained by auditors examining the bank accounts of city officials and others, subpenas will be issued calling additional witnesses in the city supplies investigation to appear before the grand jury next Tuesday it was learned today.

Startling reports regarding the size of these deposits, together with other rumors are going the rounds, but when District Attorney Andrew T. Park was asked about them he only smiled. If there is any leak about testimony, he said he had not heard it.

SCAN BANK ACCOUNTS

The auditors who are making a checkup in banks for the purpose of obtaining information as to circumstances surrounding various accounts, as well as brokerage transactions, are acting under the direction of the district attorney's office.

It is presumed that the audits are being made for the purpose of ascertaining how the money was obtained. The district attorney's office is not revealing, however, what is going on.

Numerous bankers or employes of banks are expected to be called next Tuesday. Some have been advised to hold themselves in readiness to come to the grand jury room as needed.

OFFICIALS' FINANCES

The books of the A. L. Brahm Company which sold much meat to the city in 1930 were returned yesterday, but the bank books of the concern are next to be looked into, it was stated.

No information was obtainable at the district attorney's office regarding the likelihood of other persons being indicted beyond Mayor Charles H. Kline and his deposed director of supplies, Bertram L. Succop.

Testimony regarding the bank accounts of Mayor Kline, Succop, City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, City Solicitor C. A. Waldschmidt and Frank Swaney, the Mayor's secretary, now is being studied.

VETS' LAST DAY TO FILE CLAIMS

Today is the last day on which disabled war veterans may file claims for payments on wartime insurance, but veterans who believe they are entitled to compensation may protect their rights by the filing of a simple statement of belief of disability.

The statement need only state that the claimant believes he is entitled to insurance on account of permanent disabilities and may file details of his claim at a later date.

For the convenience of disabled veterans who wish to file notice of claim the Sun-Telegraph is printing on Page 5 a coupon as provided by the American Legion County Committee. The letter in which it is mailed must bear a July 3 postmark.

Races and other contests will be held and all the park amusements will be at the disposal of the visitors.

CHIEF OUSTED IN SWISSVALE

Chief of Police William N. Campbell, of Swissvale, has been suspended by Burgess William E. Pyle, it was learned today.

The suspension became effective Wednesday and it is said he is charged with keeping prisoners in the borough lockup several days longer than the sentence imposed by the Burgess.

Campbell, who was appointed chief a year and a half ago, was formerly head of the Ingram police department.

Desk Sergt. W. R. Walker will be in charge of the department during the day and Lieut. Andrew A. Farena at night.

The case will be brought before Borough Council July 14.

Swissvale Policeman Accused of Attack

Patrolman Harry McGinn, of Swissvale, yesterday was arrested charged with aggravated assault and battery after an attempt to arrest a boy who had been shooting fireworks. The charge was made by Thomas Nacalusa, 35, of 2011 Wayne street, Swissvale. Nacalusa had been arrested earlier by the officer.

According to police, McGinn arrested a youth for shooting fireworks. Nacalusa, police say, threatened McGinn and the boy escaped.

his little journey around the world that were kind.

"The Russians were absolutely splendid. Alaska turned out in full force. I believe that is all I have to say."

GATTY, EQUALLY brief, also praised the Russians.

"The Russian Aeronautic Society were wonderful, did everything they could for us."

Apparently the Russians can discriminate.

AUSTRALIA'S PRIME Minister sent a friendly message:

"Australia is proud of Gatty, and we are sure that Gatty is proud of Post."

Gen. Ely of the United States Army made an excellent short speech, saying that the world's fliers, helping and admiring each other without animosities or jealousies, set a good example to the world's nations. Perhaps by making the world constantly smaller they will gradually make it more friendly.

He referred to German fliers in the war, dropping flowers on the graves of enemy airmen killed in battle.

IN DESCRIBING a great race, it would be unjust to forget the horse. It was a good airplane that carried those fliers around the world in less than nine days. The Detroit Aircraft Corporation made it, and Karl S. Betts, of that corporation, gave a dinner to the fliers last night.

THE ENGINE, which is the heart of the plane, the power plant that never stopped, sputtered or complained, doing nearly 150 miles an hour for 15,000 miles, was a "Wasp" engine, made by the Pratt-Whitney company.

That company, and that engine, and its brother, the "Hornet" engine, testify to the sound judgment of those who started the big United Aircraft Corporation, Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City Bank, and his associates, Boeing, Rentschler and Deeds.

IT IS ONE thing to put $100,000,000 into a company to promote flying, another thing to know what to buy with your 100 millions.

POST AND GATTY, and Mr. Hall, the good Oklahoma American with imagination and dollars, who made the flight possible, rendered a great service to the world and to this country.

They have promoted and encouraged flying. They have stirred ambition in millions of human beings.

They have demonstrated again a truth of greatest importance to human beings—that WHATEVER MEN CAN IMAGINE THEY CAN DO.

FLIERS HONORED

The fliers were honored last evening at a dinner given by F. C. Hall, of Oklahoma, backer of the flight, and the builders of the plane and its motor. While at the dinner Post and Gatty received the following telegram of congratulation from President Hoover:

"Your successful world-girdling flight is a striking contribution to aeronautical progress. It is dramatic testimony to the efficiency and reliability of American aircraft. It demonstrates visibly how modern science is making neighbors of all the nations of the world.

'AMERICA PROUD'

"America is proud of you in your hour of extraordinary success. You have enhanced faith in the art of flying and the science of air navigation. I congratulate you most heartily on your achievement. I look forward with pleasure to seeing you at the White House next Monday."

Each of the men who found themselves honored at every turn was $1,000 richer today. They were presented with the money last night by the Detroit company which built their plane and the aircraft concern which built the Winnie Mae's motor.

Weather Conditions.

Pressure is relatively low over the states east of the Mississippi, with centers of disturbance over the Ohio Valley, and extending southeastward to the coast, and over the St. Lawrence Valley. High pressure now occupies the northwestern portion. There is considerable cloudiness over the eastern states, and showers and thunderstorms were quite general over the country from the Central Plains eastward. There were also scattered showers over the Northwestern states. Temperature changes were towards cooler, but the high humidity has a marked sultry effect over the Ohio Valley states. Temperatures of 100 degrees or higher occurred over a much smaller area yesterday than for the past several days. The area included Southern Illinois, Oklahoma and Eastern Texas.

Army Fliers Escape From Burning Ship

RANTOUL, Ill., July 3.—(AP.)—Two Army aviators fought death from fire in a blazing plane 1,000 feet above Chanute Field yesterday and brought the plane to the ground before it was destroyed.

Both men were severely burned. They are Lieut. Lawrence A. Doughit, recently assigned here from Mitchell Field, N. Y., to take a course of instruction, and Priv. Matthew Sykes, a mechanic.

TWINS ESCAPE BOLT IN STACK

Screams of her 15-month-old twins, Anna and Margaret, brought Mrs. Joseph Blake running to the kitchen of her home at 1612 Edna street, when a shower of bricks and debris rained down past the windows and onto the back porch of her home during the storm late yesterday.

A 25-foot smokestack on the Film Exchange Building next door had been struck by lightning, the bricks falling to the third floor roof of the Blake home, damaging the porch and ceilings in the rooms occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schaeffer, and the rear porch of the second floor, where Mr. and Mrs. James Riley live, and shaking the entire house.

St. Francis Hospital Patient Hangs Self

Attaches at the hospital found the body suspended from a screen in a lavatory. Peters had been taken to the hospital recently for a mental disorder, the report said.

LESLIE'S ALLIES DENY AID TO ARMSTRONG

Mackrell and Topley Fail To Help in Circulating Primary Candidacy Papers

Clerks from the County Commissioners' office yesterday delivered to the other elected county officials petition blanks to be circulated among their office staffs for signatures authorizing Joesph G. Armstrong's name on the primary ballot for county commissioner.

Inquiries revealed that no blank petitions had been delivered to city councilmen, Mayor Charles H. Kline or any of the latter's official family.

Four of the nine elected county officials said they would circulate the petitions. Recorder S. D. Foster, Prothonotary John Vogt and Controller Robert G. Woodside said they would do so at once, and District Attorney Andrew T. Park declared he would begin Monday.

MACKRELL, TOPLEY SILENT

Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell and Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley, friends of former State Senator M. G. Leslie, declined to comment on the request, but it was evident no petitions were being circulated in their offices.

Coroner W. J. McGregor, another Leslie ally, said he had not asked any of his staff to sign the petitions. He declared, however, that all petitions delivered to him would receive "consideration in due time."

FRANCIES UNDECIDED

County Treasurer John Francies declared he has not taken a definite position in the current political situation and would make no comment on the Armstrong petitions. Francies, prevented by law from succeeding himself, has been named as a possible independent Republican candidate for city controller.

Sheriff Robert S. Cain said he wanted to analyize the political problems before asking his staff to sign the petition.

COYNE PETITIONS OUT

Petition blanks for signatures of frineds authorizing State Senator James J. Coyne's name on the ballot at the primary election as a Republican candidate for county commissioner were taken out yesterday by Robert B. Averbach, solicitor in the office of Sheriff Robert S. Cain.

William M. Turner, burgess of Wilkinsburg, is the first Democratic candidate for county commissioner, according to records in the County Election Bureau. Donald C. Anderson's name appeared as a Democratic candidate for district attorney.

Other petitions were issued for Charles E. Weitzel, county commissioner; John D. Graham, recorder of deeds; T. A. Havolah Chapman, prothonatory, and R. J. McGrath, county commissioner.

Prothonotary Vogt has announced his candidacy for re-election to the office which he has held for 14 years.

In his formal statement Vogt submits his candidacy: "Not alone as a Republican, but also in a business sense, having demonstrated my fitness for the office to the full satisfaction of the court, members of the bar, banks, building and loan officials, real estate dealers and all others who transact business in the office almost daily."

SACRED HEART REPAIRS NEAR COMPLETION

Church Grounds Graded, Grass, Shrubbery Placed; Annex Now Being Built

Remodeling and repair work on the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, school and grounds, in the East End district, is rapidly nearing completion. Considerable repair work has been finished on Sacred Heart School, Center avenue, which included roof and furnace work.

Landscape architects and engineers have finished work on the church grounds, and have planted shrubbery and grass. A considerable amount of earth was removed from the church grounds.

A new addition is being built for the church, which will house the new organ, now in process of assembling. The organ will be finished by October 1, according to church officials.

Three new stained-glass windows are being built for the church, one of which will be the largest in the United States.

The project, which will amount to $70,000, has been done at this time in order to give employment to men out of work, officials said.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

For society folks who'll stay in town over the Fourth there'll be all sorts of diversions at the various country clubs and at Rolling Rock.

Of course Rolling Rock will, as usual, attract a large group of week-enders. And besides golf and other sports at country clubs there'll be dinner-dances.

Tonight the Longue Vue and Edgeworth clubs are having dinner-dances, and tomorrow night there'll be dinner-dances at the Fox Chapel Golf Club and the Allegheny Country Club. And tomorrow afternoon the Allegheny Country Club will give its annual holiday party for children of members.

* * *

The Joseph M. Scribners will leave tonight for Bayhead, N. J., I've just learned.

* * *

Today I want to talk about the summer plans of some more society folks, many of whom will have left the city by tomorrow.

Travel Plans

The Joseph W. Marshes, of Woodland road, are at their summer place, Belle Isle, Beaumaris, Muskoka Lake, Ontario. And during the summer they plan to have as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Jacob S. Payton, the William C. Fuellharts and the Edward F. W. Salisburys, of Perth Amboy, N. J., their sons-in-law and daughters.

Mrs. [illegible] D. Armstrong is on her way to her summer home, Indian Knoll, Osterville, Cape Cod. This week she's spending with her son-in-law and daughter, the Andrew B. McClarys, of "White Hall," Windsor, Vt.

* * *

An attractive event of next week will be a tea Mrs. Paul Nesbit Critchlow, of Sewickley, will give Wednesday in her home honoring her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Nesbit Critchlow, who, with Mr. Critchlow and their family, has returned to Sewickley. They are occupying the home of Mrs. Charles W. Brown, Jr., Thorn street, Sewickley.

New Century of Dormont, Already Under Roof, to Be Completed By Middle of September

After working towards that end for more than 15 years, but actually building for only six weeks, the Dormont New Century Club has a roof of its own, its cornerstone is laid and by mid-September it will have a property worth at least $25,000.

The cornerstone was laid last night with fitting ceremony, which began with assembly singing of "Pennsylvania," Andrew Bell, cornet, and John Bell, trombone, furnishing the accompaniment. Mrs. Howard H. Heinrich, president, greeted the guests, and Burgess Charles Chamberlin voiced the appreciation of the borough for the club's work and spirit. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. U. Franklin Smiley.

The Rev. Dr. James E. Wagner in a short talk on the value of personality, spoke first of material values, saying it is human personality that gives money its value, that to one man alone it could have no worth since it could have no exchange. It takes life to get money and money earned means so many hours lived, Dr. Wagner said. This he translated into terms of the clubhouse and the clubwomen, going on to show how both will develop the culture of personality.

ENGLISH DENIES MELLON RAP

Councilman W. Y. English, quoted Monday as saying in Council meeting: "The Mellons can't do everything and get away with it," today denied the utterance.

The Mellons were mentioned during a discussion of whether the city should pay $134 for gasoline ordered by a city employe by telephone from the Gulf Refining Company, a Mellon concern.

Mr. English, in his denial, said:

"I did not denounce the Mellon interests.

"On the contrary, I said the Mellons, who own the Gulf Refining Company, are big taxpayers and, in my opinion, as good citizens, might be glad to donate the amount of this small bill in order to help Council put a stop to the practice of city employes going ahead with this kind of business.

"I said it was time city employes learned to do things right. If city employes have not learned their lesson after all the investigations, I said, it was up to Council to stop it by refusing to approve any more of these mistakes of employes."

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

People I've Met

EDWIN WALLACE DUNN. Now the late Eddie Dunn and the last of a picturesque clan. For the last 27 years he was the general representative for George M. Cohan and there wasn't a mark against him.

This is not an obituary. It is more the story of a great character. Eddie was the one person on Broadway who never borrowed from George Cohan. Although the newspapers said he was 73 when he died, he was actually 76. Cohan alone knew the real age, and George kept the secret. Eddie had a reason. He didn't want the younger generation to think he was an old man.

For nearly three decades he answered his master's mail. He guarded off touches. He talked nicely to actors who were out of work, engaged executive staffs for hotels and never failed to phone the boss at 6:30 every night. That rule went, regardless of whether Cohan was on 42nd street or far away on the road.

Dunn never permitted anyone to write his life story. There was no biography of the man anywhere. Tommy Mahon of the Mae Bride ticket organization knew him better than any rest but even Tommy only scratched Denver or St. Louis was his birthplace. His career started in the box office of the Grand Opera Theater a long, long time ago. Beyond that, nobody seems to know.

Eddie was first known as a "writing press agent." He was a "stunt man" and a good one. He never tossed a woman into a park reservoir and he refrained to stage fake duels. He did, however, blow up toy balloons and sail them over the main streets of the land. On the blue balloons were pairs of free tickets. There weren't many blue ones—but the excitement was always terrific.

The man liked his occasional nip. On a tour with the Four Cohans, some 25 years ago, George Cohan decided to have a little fun with him. He told Dunn that unless he signed the pledge his job was a thing of the past.

Dunn hated the very idea but felt that there was nothing he could do about it. So, accompanied by the company manager, he went to a priest.

Just as Eddie, with tears in his eyes, was about to sign the document, he looked up at the good Father.

"I want you to know, Father," he cried, "that I'm a Protestant and that I'm terribly sorry to bother you. But I'm signing just the same."

And he did, too. . . .

Years back he was the advance man for W. F. Carver's humpty-dumpty Wild West show. In those days of good old Buffalo Bill it was the custom of ranchmen to wear long hair. Accordingly, Eddie had long locks sewed on to his sombrero. When he removed his hat the hair came with it. The editors laughed and when you can make an editor laugh, your space in their papers is already assured. Eddie never missed.

During his life the man posted bills, arranged routines and did everything thing else you might think of around a theater. The only thing he never did was to write a play—and that alone should draws cheers for his memory.

Eddie Dunn never did go in too heavily for the romantic angles. He was devoted to the Cohan family, and that was enough for him. Back in the eighties, however, he did go for a gal in a big way.

He was without employment and a high diver in the Chute Park in St. Louis, got him a job as press agent for the resort on the condition that he marry her. Eddie accepted both contracts.

"She made it easy for me," he always said in later years. "I loved her and didn't know how to tell her."

That was his last big romance until rather recently. He really considered matrimony once again. The old showman I guess grew lonesome while George was in the country.

Everything was arranged for the ceremony. When the cab arrived to go through with the knot however, Eddie suddenly backed out.

"Suppose," he told the woman, "that Mr. Cohan should call me to take care of something while I am downtown at City Hall? Nothing doing. Let's call it off."

And that's exactly what happened.

You were quite a guy, Eddie Dunn. . . .

Flight's End In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The triumphant finish of the flight around the world by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. There are pictures of the vast assemblage of 15,000 milling around in the intense heat and humidity. With a great roar the Winnie Mae appears over the field to make a perfect landing. Mrs. Post is shown greeting her husband. Police struggle to get the fliers through the milling mob, now almost riotous, and up to the hangar, where the weary fliers pose for pictures and are greeted by Dr. John J. Finley on behalf of Mayor Walker.

There also are pictures of the official reception tendered them by the City of New York. Following a quaint old custom, which decrees that all famous personages must enter the city through the Battery, for their official reception, Post and Gatty are shown boarding the city boat, Macom, in the North River, and proceeding to the Battery. Later they are shown on the ride up Broadway through a shower of ticker tape and the hundreds of thousands of persons. At the City Hall they are officially greeted by Mayor Walker. There is a thrilling description of all the doings by the Globe Trotter.

In Osaka, Japan, they have organized a baseball league for girl players only, and two of the teams are shown in a struggle for the championship.

With the whole country in the grasp of a heat wave, ski fans are shown indulging in their favorite sport down the side of a snow-capped mountain in Colorado.

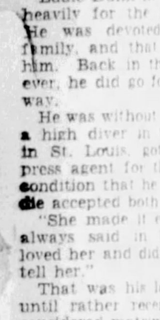
Lancaster, Pa., claims to possess the world's fastest talker. He is an auctioneer and he is seen and heard selling cattle in a live stock market.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You remember I told you there was some awful good dead Republicans. Well, the finest woman of 'em all has died—ex-Congresswoman Alice Robinson, of Oklahoma. Nick Longworth told me this story:



Will Rogers

"When they was voting on the soldiers' bonus she didn't believe in it in her own heart and she told why and told that her action would mean her finish in Congress. She told how she loved 'em and had fed 'em and spent every cent she ever had on 'em and she had, but that she wouldn't vote against her conscience just to stay in Congress."

Nick said every man in the room went to her and complimented her on her bravery, then went over and voted the way the most votes were back home. She was a fine old soul—too fine for politics.

Yours, WILL.

'Smart Money' Now On Enright Screen

Edward G. Robinson's latest picture, "Smart Money," opened a three-day engagement in the Enright yesterday. This is the film about a small-town barber who becomes a big-town gambler. It won extravagant praise from the critics when it was presented in the Stanley recently. James Cagney, the principal in "Public Enemy," also is in the cast.

Fireworks, Band Concert In West View

A special Fourth of July program will be carried out tomorrow afternoon and evening in West View Park. There will be four concerts by the Grand Army Band, of Pittsburgh.

In the evening a display of fireworks will be a feature. Mme. Banard's Animal Circus will give free performances afternoon and evening.

America's Need Pastor's Subject

"America's Greatest Need" will be the morning subject of the Rev. Samuel Hill, of the Butler Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Fortieth and Butler streets. At the evening service his subject will be "God Speaking to His People."

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Old Timer

If you had seen me twenty years ago—
Young, wealthy, wise—no sneers or curses, then;
Ah, Broadway was a fairyland, aglow,
What scenes! I see Delmonico's again.
Jack's, Shanley's and the Knickerbocker Bar
With Old King Cole benignly looking down;
The years have flown and I have traveled far,
But, youngster, this was once a princely town.

What shows! What girls! What magic nights I spent!
With golden lads who shared my wine with me;
If I had just a bit of what I lent
I'd not abuse your generosity.

Ah, bless you, sir. There's few like you today—
I wish you could have shared the old Broadway.
—Brooke Edison.

For the Records

No man, or woman, for that matter, has hurt the heart of Peggy Joyce so much as a recent statement that she is 43 years of age. The most famous of the blondes felt pretty wretched about the lie, of course, but her good friend, Jack Lait, challenged any person to a duel of typewriters this kind of the sort Capone uses to prove that Peggy isn't 43.

Lait asserts Peggy was born on May 27, 1898, at Berkeley, Va., a suburb of Norfolk. Peggy says she was born on May 26, 1898. Her passport, however, gives the date as July 6, 1898—the passport clerk confusing her birthday with the day she applied for it. Heheheh, I mean, the day and month, of course.

So that the records may be kept accurate then, Peggy was born in the year 1898, and you are a cad if you ask, "B. C.?"

Depression Note

And, take it from the songsmiths along the Grandest Canyon, things are so tough in the music business that Harms is only paying royalty on "One Heart in 2-4 Time"!!!

Character

Eddie Leonard, the headliner, is the N. Y. Giants' most rabid rooter. He rarely misses a game at the Polo Grounds, and is known to have canceled vaudeville engagements rather than miss an important series.

The pastime, they tell you, does much to keep the veteran artist young and alive—and he has his own system to make his home team win. He bets that it will lose!

At this paragraphing, the Giants have won 38 games and dropped 27—Leonard losing nine games or $900—a reasonable fee for happiness and health.

Tomb It May Concern

Tears fell when you whispered "Adieu."
. . . but tears dry quickly,
At least, mine do.
—A. M. W.

A Form of Criticism

The theatrical sitch-ee-ayshun, according to a show business journal, is in a fine mess. A producer is reported in Chicago buying actors for $1 the bushel.

"Really?" queried a rival manager, "when did the price go up?"

42nd Street

The second most famous street in New York has gone Coney Island and all that, we know. Flea circuses to the right of you, shooting galleries to the left of you and everything that goes to make it "Small-Times Square."

But amid all the dirt and nudity at the burlesque theater on that thoroughfare last week, the outstanding feature of the show was the singing of "Annie Laurie" by a soprano, who was fully clothed.

The grimy males in the audience gave the number the heaviest applause (which the singer merited), and the off-color jokes and the peeled "beauties" ran a poor second and a frightful third. It's little things like that, that makes big paragraphs like these.

Gag

Fred Allen relates that at a Broadway opening the audience, almost to a man, hissed the proceedings, except one chap, who kept applauding.

"Do you mean to say," Fred asked him, "that you have the unmitigated nerve to encourage such rotten acting?"

"Rotten acting, nothing!" snapped the hand-clapper, "I'm applauding the hissing."

The Poke Graceful

Between acts on the pavement the other premiere evening some of the drama defenders were talking shop again. Percy Hammond, who has inspected the shows for over 30 years, asserted that he never read his contemporaries.

"Why don't you?" we asked.

"Because," was the retort swelegant, "the poor critics would bore me, and the good ones would make me envious."

Hot Weather Song

I feel so exceedingly lazy,
I neglect what I oughtn't to should!
My notion of work is so hazy
That I couldn't to toil if I would!

I feel so exceedingly silly
That I say all I shouldn't to ought!
And my mind is as frail as a lily;
It would break with the weight of a thought!
—Don Marquis.

Merciless Truth

Marc Lachmann, all the way from Hollywood, observes that the world would be a nicer place to live in if more of us didn't take ourselves so seriously—and remembered that we're all here on a visit.

"Always Belittlin' "

Mr. Edward Locke, author of "The Revolt," and other reasons for bad theatrical seasons, observed in an interview that he always writes his plays by artificial light because plays are produced by artificial light, and that, therefore, he believed that this was the logical way to go about writing plays.

To which George Jean Nathan snapped:

"Mr. Locke will agree with his critics that inasmuch as people always go to bed in the dark, it is but logical that, when the lights go out in the theater, and one of his plays gets under way, they should go to sleep."

'Wild West' Opening Today

The "101 Ranch Real Wild West" has arrived in Pittsburgh for a two-day stay at Penn and Fifth avenues. Two performances will be given today and two tomorrow, at 2 and 8 o'clock.

A parade is scheduled for the East End district this morning.

Features include "Reckless" Billy Keene, champion trick rider of the world; the Swift Zouaves; a herd of performing elephants, and Stack Lee and Jack Webb, champion sharpshooters. Others include the Capt. Austin King School of Educated Horses, and a free automobile show.

Rodeo Exhibition Opens in Kennywood

The Compton-Hughes Wild West Rodeo, with a personnel of 50 cowboys, cowgirls and Indians, will open an extended engagement in Kennywood Park today and will be one of the feature attractions at the annual Fourth of July celebration tomorrow.

Noon, afternoon and evening performances by the Flying Sullivans, famous trapeze troupe; swimming in the big pool, dancing to Joe Falvo's Orchestra, and all the park's multitude of amusement and recreational devices will be other events on the Fourth of July program.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The play for tomorrow is "An American Tragedy"—not by Theodore Dreiser. Isn't that a nice holiday note? Well, you know, the old skeleton at the feast that's me. The grisly boy himself. But you'll not have to worry if you don't get yourself mixed up with any fire works and do your celebrating in that line by letting George shoot 'em off for you. You can get all the explosive noise you need at 101 Ranch Wild West and see the hardy rancher combat the redskin at the same time. Kennywood will make the eagle scream, too, and you can hear it howl with entire safety to yourself. West View will wind up a day of independence with what the press agent boys call a pyrotechnical display. But if you don't want any whoopee at all, there are the movie houses. The Penn, Stanley, Fulton and Sheridan all change bills today. For a quiet Fourth the cinema house seems just right.

Small Timer defines a pedestrian as a person who maintains that automobiles are corrupting the morals of the nation.

Teddy Joyce comes back to the Penn today as guest master of ceremonies in a stage bill, "Hello Teddy." When Teddy decides to overpower a ceremony it might just as well resign, for it is as good as vanquished when Teddy grapples with it.

Small Timer says he hopes everybody will have a good time tomorrow—and assures them they will have it if they arrange things so the fifth will be just another date instead of the "day after."

William Seldon, who plays dramatic parts and a trombone, will show show boat audiences of the Golden Rod what he can do in the former line when he acts out with Cap'n Menke's troupers next wk. This week he has been gnawing at trombone. He certainly knows how to make th' ol' sliphorn slip.

Small Timer says home now merely is the place where you have your laundry delivered.

Postoffice Closed All Day on Fourth

The Pittsburgh postoffice with all of its branches will be closed all day tomorrow, Postmaster James B. Anderson announced. There will be no delivery by carriers. Collections will be according to holiday schedule.

FIREMAN KILLED FIGHTING BLAZE IN BREWERY

Plunges 65 Feet When Roof Gives Away; 4 Companions Hurt; Trucks in Crashes

A fireman was killed and seven injured while fighting fires or in wrecks en route to fires during the electrical storm late yesterday. The dead man and four of the injured were members of the Stowe Township Volunteer Fire Department. The other three were city firemen.

Anthony Ranalli, 21, of 93 High road, member of Company No. 2, Stowe Township, was fatally injured when he was hurled 65 feet to a cement floor while fighting a fire in the six-story building of the Independent Brewing Company, Island avenue. Lightning struck the building, causing flames which resulted in $15,000 damage.

ROOF GIVES WAY

Ranalli plunged to the floor when a portion of the roof on which he was standing broke. He died in the Ohio Valley Hospital an hour after the accident. Injured in the brewery fire were Nick Haden, 23, of Walter street; Dominic Ranalli, 18, brother of the dead fireman; Lenerd Bungaralli, 22, of 104 Fleming avenue, and Joseph Krahulik, of 814 Hober avenue, West Park. They were treated at the Ohio Valley Hospital.

Lightning struck the dome on the top of the brewery. The building, unused since prohibition, housed the old brewing equipment. Volunteer companies responded from Ingram and Neville Island. Fire Chief Max Homer made the estimate of damage.

TRUCKS IN WRECKS

The city firemen were injured when trucks in which they were speeding to fires figured in accidents. Fireman Eugene Steinbrenner, of 1312 Stranmore street, is in the Mercy Hospital suffering concussion of the brain. He was hurt when the truck of No. 41 Engine Company, North Side, was hit by a commercial truck at West North avenue and Arch street.

Andrew Stehle, 48, of 32 Schillinger street, driver of the latter truck, was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital suffering a fractured skull and internal injuries. The fire apparatus was en route to a building at 801 Irwin avenue to extinguish a small blaze in an elevator shaft.

Firemen Leo Plunkett, 40, of 6304 Sawyer street, and Patrick Joyce, 38, of 5356 Dresden way, were thrown to the street when No. 9 Engine Company's truck skidded against a pole at Butler and Forty-eighth streets. They were taken to St. Francis Hospital. The alarm they were answering was false, it was reported.

The fire, of unknown origin, started in the flooring at the front of the bowling alley on the second floor and spread quickly throughout the two-story brick building, according to Fire Chief William Elcock. Three stores, the Bushee confectionery, the Howard cleaning shop, G. R. Hornbake haberdashery and a vacant storeroom, were damaged $18,000, Chief Elcock said.

BAN ON TAXICAB CRUISING URGED

Banning of cruising taxicabs and the requirement of off-street cab stands in congested areas were proposed for inclusion in new permits to cab companies or renewals, yesterday by the Better Traffic Committee.

The committee stressed the desirability of no cab stands being located on congested thoroughfares.

As much as 20 per cent of the traffic on some streets is that of empty, cruising cabs, City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre said.

Barrage of Dogs Protested by Wife Seeking Divorce

Her husband threw 4-week-old pups at her, one after another, when she asked him to drown them, and the pups died from the shock, according to a bill of particulars filed in Common Pleas Court by Mrs. Blanche B. Bueneman, 7 Rudolph street, seeking a divorce from Albert H. Bueneman, Ainsworth street. He was jealous of young men who patronized their Arnold street store and called her names, struck and kicked her, she averred. They were married January 7, 1914 and parted August 28.

FORBES ST. RAID YIELDS LIQUOR

An alleged speakeasy at 2214 Forbes street, declared by prohibition agents to be one of the most popular in the city, was raided by the agents last night.

Large quantities of gin, whisky and ale were confiscated in the building, which was equipped with a bar on the first floor and drinking rooms on the second, agents said. The raid followed the seizure of a beer-laden truck which was making a delivery to the rear of the place.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

PREDICTS FALL GAIN IN RADIO SALES

Local Dealers Preparing Smaller, Cheaper Sets For Expected Demand

The radio industry in this district has been very quiet for several months past, but local dealers and distributors are preparing for a fair amount of activity in the fall, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

It is expected that the demand for new sets will be largely for smaller and cheaper models and the average prices will be considerably lower than has been the case in the past. Conditions at this time apparently indicate a volume of business considerably lower than a year ago.

COLLECTIONS SLOW

Abnormally high temperatures, while they have stimulated demand for some lines of seasonal merchandise, have had a tendency to slow down other lines. Jobbers report buying very largely for filling-in purposes, with future orders light.

A rather sharp decrease is reported in the production of crude oil, with prices showing little change. Bituminous coal output is from 15 to 20 per cent lower than it was a year ago. Owing to heavy stocks carried over in the lake region and the northwest, shipments on the Great Lakes have thus far been much lower than normal.

GLASS FIRMS SHOW LOSS

A careful checkup on the first six months of the year is likely to reveal that most firms engaged in manufacturing window glass will show losses, according to National Glass Budget. Although official figures are not available, an estimate, believed to be fairly well based, is that sales of window glass since January 1 will total in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 boxes, each containing 50 square feet. During the month of May demand is believed to have exceeded production of window glass. A decrease in the amount of orders placed for window glass was registered during June.

At present, production of window glass is low. On the first of June seven firms, not including the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, were operating eight tanks equipped with a total of 57 machines. One other tank with four machines, was then down for hot repairs. It was to resume operation at an early date. A random prediction is that more window glass will be shipped during the last six months of 1931 than was moved since January 1.

This would be the logical time for those interested in the industry to lay plans tending toward averaging up the losses sustained since January first by hereafter marketing their product at a profit. A strenuous effort should be made by all to carry on their business throughout the balance of 1931 in a manner that would aid in getting into the black column rather than to stay in red.

8,000 Coal Operators To Visit Steel Mills

FIRM EXPANDS SALES UNITS

NEW YORK, July 3.—Profits of International Business Machines Corporation for the first five months, after federal taxes, were 4 per cent ahead of those for the corresponding 1930 period, Thomas J. Watson, president, reported to directors at the regular meeting.

O. E. Braitmayer, vice president after visiting International Business Machines Corporation's sales organizations in 15 European countries reported to directors that the company's European sales were ahead of those to date last year. The company's organization throughout Europe is being expanded, he said, and the outlook there is favorable for continued gain in the company's business.

Holiday Toy Orders Take Sharp Jump

NEW YORK, July 3.—Holiday toy orders showed a sharp rise in the New York market during the past week and manufacturers now look forward to a July business from 10 to 15 per cent ahead of July, 1930. Since the middle of last month, sales agents said, buyers have shown a keen interest in Christmas items and many have placed substantial orders. It was said many others planned buying trips to New York in the next two weeks.

Wholesale Prices Decline in Week

NEW YORK, July 3.—Wholesale prices, as measured by Bradstreet's Weekly Food Index, show a decline of four-tenths of 1 per cent to $2.15, as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 20.4 per cent from the corresponding week of last year. Practically all commodities held steady or gained slightly over the preceding week, with the exception of livestock and grains.

N. Y. Reserve Bank Rate Unchanged

NEW YORK, July 3.—Following the meeting of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, no announcement was made regarding the rediscount rate, which is 1½ per cent.

AUTUMN SPURT EXPECTED IN STEEL

Industry Faces Second Half With Confidence; Pipe Business Grows

By B. E. V. LUTY

The better feeling that developed in the steel trade last week has been accentuated this week, and the second half of the year is faced with confidence, it being expected that autumn improvement will be of much more than usual seasonal proportions.

Steel ingot production this week has averaged about 34 per cent of capacity, excluding Independence Day, which is always strictly observed as a steel mill holiday. There is a loss of 3 points in a week and 6 points in four weeks, this being strictly seasonal, and next week will probably be lighter, partly by a few plants being closed entirely for repairs and to accumulate orders.

PICKUP SEEN

There is such a dip that a mild rebound should be visible in the second half of the month, while August has always totaled above July when there was to be any autumn improvement at all. The marked improvement is expected for September and October. From the steel viewpoint, June, July and August constitute the dull summer.

Fabricated structural steel shipments in May are officially reported at 148,000 tons, there having been an almost unbroken decrease since October. Curiously enough, previously in this depression fabricated structural steel was accounting for decidedly more than its former proportion of the steel made while now it is down to its old proportion.

PIPE DEMAND HOLDS

Reports are that chances of financing pipe line projects have improved and there are many projects, apparently quite promising. A large volume of business was reported last week as placed while no purchases of consequence are reported this week. Demand for standard or merchant pipe holds the slight gain it made in May.

The farm implement industry had a very light half year and it is always dull in this midyear period. It can scarcely avoid doing better in the second half of the year. Rail production is doing better this month than expected, there being some fresh releases against annual orders, while there is the frequently seen "secondary buying movement."

Fliers Get Tame Greeting; Only 11 Heads Cracked

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

After flying around the world, Post and Gatty said it was all like Oklahoma.

When they landed in New York the police only cracked 11 people over the heads. We've seen better receptions than that.

They made the perfect three-point landing which Stribling promises to Schmeling tonight in Cleveland.

Stribling is an aviator also. He's in there with a ground mechanic this time.

Andrew Mellon won't see the contest. Andy is over in Paris trying to persuade a Frenchman to give something away for nothing. His percentage of success now averages one needle to a haystack.

But Andy missed the heat wave. When he gets back he can spend the summer in the Treasury which is empty and cool.

Our national deficit has finally reached a strategic spot. It's less than we expected and more than we hoped for.

Motor Industry Studies Summer Model Plan

DETROIT, July 3.—(AP.)—In the midst of the "quiet period" that has become more or less of a tradition in midsummer, the automobile industry continues to ponder over the effect of the retail division of the move decided upon by many manufacturers to bring out no new models in June, July and August.

Although the policy, agreed to and adhered to by many of the industry's leading companies, was looked upon as a means of circumventing a mid-summer falling off in retail distribution, the summer months of the "recovery year," seemingly are destined to be no different than those of previous years. In other years most of the new models have been off the assembly lines and in distributors' hands during the mid-year season. The effect, in a general way, has been to influence potential buyers to withhold their purchases until the new lines could be examined.

Sponsors of the no mid-summer model policy point out that a combination of circumstances has operated to prevent a fair trial of the plan. Potential buyers, they say, have withheld purchases because of unemployment and consequent curtailed income. Moreover, they explain, some manufacturers with their new models already on blueprints and factory retooling begun, were unable to hold back the new cars until November and December, as the plan originally contemplated.

Output Below Estimate

Despite its only partial observance and the fact it apparently has failed to favorably affect the retail trade, the plan has helped materially in reducing dealers' inventories, so that when additional new models are brought out in the latter months of the year, retail distributors handling these makes should be in better shape for stocking new cars than they have been for many months.

With the tapering off of output and retail demand during the last few weeks a disinclination to estimate the industry's total output for 1931 appears to have developed. Earlier in the year predictions were heard of a total production in excess of 4,000,000 units. This has been revised downward, however, and a later guess placed the figure at 3,500,000. Whether the actual output will even approximate that of last year seemingly depends upon what the early fall months bring in the way of retail demand.

Production in Control

Regardless of what the ultimate total shows, it appears safe to say the industry at the end of 1931 will find itself in decidedly better shape from every viewpoint than it was at the close of last year. No small part of this condition will be due to the fact that excepting normal retail stocks, every car produced will have been sold. This will have been accomplished as a result of the careful restriction of supply to demand.

Looking into next year and even the year after some authorities in the industry profess to see an absolute leveling off the production peaks and valleys to the point where output and coincidentally employment—will be more nearly uniform and steady the year around. While in other quarters some question has been raised whether this can be accomplished in an industry as widespread and as competitive as the making and selling of automobiles, there appears to be little disagreement with the statement that the industry never again will be permitted to get out of hand as it did in the uncontrolled drive for a production record in 1929.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
"Public Improvements Promote Progress"

The improvement of Ingomar Road, in McCandless Township, represented new highway construction and increased the mileage of county paved roads 1.51 miles. It provides a new paved connection from the west to the border line of North Park, beginning at the western terminus, which is Perry Highway. It creates also another cross-country stretch of highway, making available a connecting link between highways radiating from Pittsburgh.

The new pavement is of reinforced concrete, 9 inches thick at the edges and 7 inches at the center. The pavement is 20 feet wide and 1.51 miles long.

This contract was awarded to the Allegheny Contracting Company on May 27, 1930. It was completed during September, 1930, the final construction cost being $89,135.05. The source of county funds was the 1928 Peoples Bond Issue.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS GAIN OF 1 TO 3

Optimistic Construction Put on News of Debt Conference; Trading Quiet

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—The stock market turned upward at the close of a patience-trying week today, as Wall street grew confident of an early Franco-American accord on war debts.

Trading was quiet, as many traders had left town for the holiday week-end. News from Paris, London and Washington, however, was generally construed in banking quarters as promising a satisfactory settlement of the war debt problem, however, and advances of 1 to 3 points appeared in principal shares. Bonds also improved.

Shares selling up 2 to 3 points included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, International Telephone, American Tobacco "B" and Westinghouse Electric. Utilities and chemicals displayed group strength.

Wall street was more encouraged than otherwise by the gain of $73,000,000 in weekly brokers' loans, the largest since March. The gain in loans comes after 10 consecutive weeks of declines and is interpreted as indicating a fresh speculative interest in stocks. As President Whitney, of the Stock Exchange, said in his annual report, Wall street feels that it is as undesirable to have brokerage loans too low as to have them too high. The stock exchange's monthly tabulation showed that loans fell in June to a new low since the tabulation started in 1926, at $1,391,324,992.

While strictly comparable figures are not available, this is apparently the lowest since 1922, or since well before the start of the 1924-1929 bull market.

Gain of roughly $44,000,000 in the Federal Reserves holding of government securities was still more conclusive evidence than last week's gain of half as much that the reserve is embarking upon a fresh program to release credit through purchases of governments. Call money was freely offered in the outside markets at 1 per cent, although the official rate held at 1½.

PROFIT REPORT RECEPTION STUDIED

Wall Street's Reaction to Expected Poor Earnings Uncertain Despite Rally

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 3.—The recent renaissance of better feeling, resulting from the Hoover debt maneuver, came too late to have much effect on the profit reports of representative corporations for the second quarter.

Accordingly, it should be borne in mind that the market will still be called upon to absorb unfavorable news in the form of second quarter statements. The reception of these reports will depend on the prevailing mood of the public. Ordinarily, it would be assumed that the character of the reports would be common knowledge, and therefore would be fully discounted. This, however, did not work out when the first quarter reports for 1931 were published. In a moronic spirit the market slumped greatly after the reports were published.

Mr. Rukeyser

NEWS SELECTION

But experienced observers know that the speculative significance of objective news depends on the current mental attitude of the public. In time of pessimism, Wall street, as John Hancock, of Lehman Brothers, remarked to me, throws all good news in the wastebasket. On the other hand, in times of elation it throws all bad news in the wastebasket.

Accordingly, market price shifts are mercurial, but fundamental changes in industry come more slowly. Over the long pull, more fortunes are established by astute decisions made on the basis of the underlying economics of the situation than by rash guesses as to how the speculative public will react for short periods.

TEXTILE RECOVERY

Perhaps the textile industry will repeat the role it played a decade ago as the advance harbinger of returning prosperity. In commenting on recent improvement, George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, Inc., told me:

"Certain well - defined branches of the cotton textile industry began to show improvement in sales volume for several months prior to the recent favorable worldwide developments. It is very significant that these branches of the industry were the only ones participating in group advertising."

Sales of high-grade cotton goods and print cloth yarn fabrics for the first five months of 1931, Sloan revealed, were 14 per cent greater than for the same period in 1930.

Northwestern June Carloadings Down

CHICAGO, July 3. — Chicago and Northwestern Railway June car-loadings totaled 124,378 cars, comparing with 127,418 cars in May and 144,795 in June, 1930.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 3.—Unexpected downturns in Liverpool wheat quotations led to lower prices for grains early today. Liverpool reported that Russia had begun offering wheat on a parity, and this announcement was interpreted here as meaning large scale competition with wheat from North America. Opening unchanged to ⅝ cents lower, wheat later declined all around. Corn started ¼@½ off and held near the initial limits.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

VALLEY SCRAP PRICE RAISED

Youngstown iron and steel scrap quotations have been marked up by a leading dealer. No. 1 heavy melting steel is quoted at $10 to $10.50, up 50 cents a ton from a week ago on the likelihood that the summer lull in Youngstown steel mill operations will be less pronounced than expected. No large sales are reported, but the largest dealer is quoting higher prices on other principal grades.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 3.—Cotton opened steady today, 12 to 20 points higher. Offerings were light and the market soon speculated quite readily to buying orders, with July selling up to 10c. December to 10.61c during the early trading, or about 17 to 23 points net higher.

The buying tapered off later in the morning and the market became quiet, with prices reacting a few points under pre-holiday realizing and some New Orleans hedge sellers. Offers were inclined to put rather a less favorable interpretation on the news from the Paris conference, but reactions were limited and prices at midday were holding within 2 or 3 points of the best.

Are Most Big Weddings Just Foolish Extravagance?

Are you for Big Weddings with veils 'n' all the fixin's?

Do they mean a priceless memory, which every girl should have, no matter how lean her lover's purse may be?

Or are they just foolish extravagance?

Lotta was for 'em. And she wanted hers done up in style. For years 'n' years she'd dreamed of shower bouquets and pretty bridesmaids and a soft, flowing veil. But—

DIFFERENT OPINIONS

"Nonsense!" snorted Sam, her hero. "What's the idea throwing away all that money, with times like they are? Stick it in the bank for a rainy day. Or, if you must spend it, there's that avenue—"

And Dad 'n' Mom backed him up. So the riot was on. It's still raging with Sadie and Connie Rose on opposite sides. We'll let Sadie fire the opening gun.

"You're right, Lotta," says she. "I know. I tried Sam's recipe, and it wasn't so good! I'll just give you a good example of what happened to one girl—me—when she passed up a swell wedding and gave all the money she'd saved to her boy friend to add to the 'furniture money,' and so forth.

"I had been working hard for several years, and had saved up quite a bit of money. I was a generous and gullible soul, so I thought I'd help the Big Boy out, instead of having the pretty wedding I'd dreamed of and wanted, since I knew he didn't have much of a nest egg.

"Well, time has passed. I worked and saved more money. And several times now he has needed 'extra funds' . . . and I had it, so he got it. And what happened?

HUBBY TOOK MONEY

"I'll tell you. He threw me over. He took all my love and money—and left me flat. For another woman! So now I have nothing. No pretty wedding to remember. No money—and no marriage, after nine years of saving and scraping and hard work trying to make things go. How's that for a break? I might just as well have spent that money on myself, and had some fun out of it.

"Of course, I'm not saying Lotta's Sam would be like that, but I think she'll get more happiness out of remembering her pretty wedding (even if it is only lean times she has to contend with) than out of buying furniture or sticking what little she has away. She'll have pleasant memories, anyway. Here's wishing her luck!"

But Connie Rose has other ideas. "I think Lotta's foolish," she begins. "Of course, I guess all girls dream about a Big Wedding, but, after all, isn't it just showing off?

FAVORS ECONOMY

"A lot of my own friends have gone in for them. They were fortunate at the time, in having folks who could pay for them. But they would be better off, right now, if they had the money instead of the 'memory,' because, since times are so hard, a lot of them are in a tight corner and can't meet their bills.

"I am going to get married soon myself to a poor but ambitious boy, and my wedding is going to be a very small, quiet affair, with as little fuss as possible. We adore each other, and why should we spend a lot on our wedding?

"After all, isn't it marrying the man you love that really counts, even if you just go and stand up before a justice of the peace? The rest doesn't mean a thing. That's the way I feel, and I'm not going in for a lot of frills."

Is that the way you feel, too, pal?

And is a big wedding "just for show?" or will it fill some real hunger in Lotta's soul . . . and make life sweeter and happier for her?

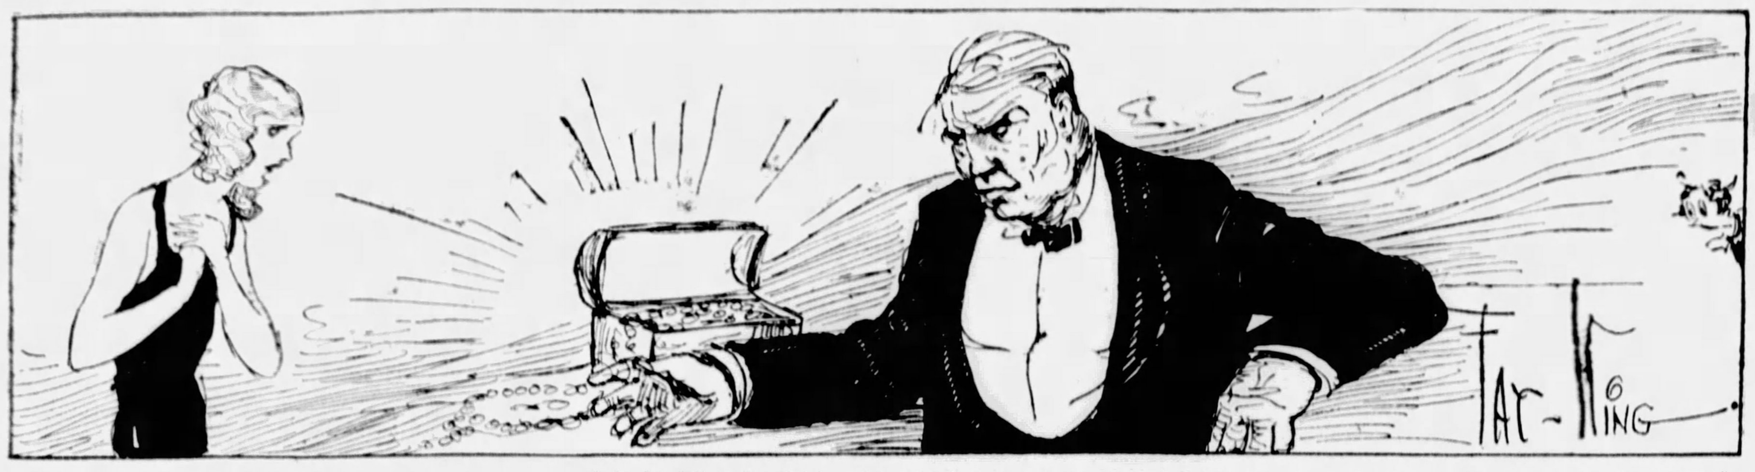
Great Beauty Too Often Only Leads to Great Unhappiness, Says Fay King



By FAY KING

How many times we read that great beauty has only led to great unhappiness.

Beauty naturally attracts many admirers.

If a beauty is permitted to make her own choice she will undoubtedly follow the dictates of her heart, easily win the young man she really loves and live happily forever after.

But beauty is too often selfishly exploited by those who mean to gain through its powers.

Ambitious, managing mothers soon become expert in scaring off likable young men of limited means, and equally adept in encouraging the suit of rich old Don Juans.

It is quite common to see a beauty become the family sacrifice that considers the only successful marriage that one which will link them all to luxury and ease.

STYLIST PRESENTS NEWEST VOGUE IN EVENING FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, July 3. — The evening frock that can go places and do things and be festive without being too formal and grand is having a huge success this season. Entertaining has become a spontaneous affair, rather than a series of carefully planned, elaborate entertainments, and so we all want frocks that will be at home at a formal restaurant or resort and still not be too grand if one does not patronize the restaurant or club of the moment. We like to dress on blithe summer evenings, but few of us want to dress up. And there is a wide chasm between these two phases of sartorial desire. And so we have delightful frocks that, when they do have deep decolletes, even things up by having little sleeves when the decollete is more restricted in its depth. Printed chiffons, georgettes and crepes are ideal for these frocks, as there is a gay informality about a print that a monotone can never quite achieve. You will find that a couple of these dresses will solve the question of what to wear for summer evenings most successfully and you will always be splendidly and appropriately dressed.

* * *

WORTH MAKES the delightful example, here shown, of the informal summery dinner frock. He has used yellow chiffon printed with large flowers of pale pink outlined with black. The design is rather unevenly spaced on the plain yellow background with here and there a scattering of single blossoms. The decollete is modest at both front and back and there is a soft belt tied on one side.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Baby's First Feedings Require Extreme Care

Recently I wrote of the importance of natural feeding of the infant by the mother. Today I want to tell you of certain precautions necessary.

Dr. Copeland

For the first few days the nursing of the baby is, indeed, a tiresome and difficult undertaking. The child, as well as the mother, must become accustomed to the procedure.

The first day the child should be fed every six hours. On the second day, once in every four hours is the usual practice. During this period the fluid contains more "colostrum" than milk.

Colostrum is found right after the baby is born. It serves as a cleansing agent for the infant's digestive tract. It prepares the stomach to digest the milk.

Never feed the baby sweetened water, catnip tea, milk "pap" or any other preparation during the first few days. The digestive system is not ready for food.

Nature will supply all nourishment demanded during these trying days. The child may cry, but do not think it is due to hunger or colic. There are a hundred reasons for crying and most authorities believe a certain amount of crying is desirable. It develops the lungs and muscles.

It is very important to train the infant in regular habits. There must be stated times for the feedings. On the third day the child should be put on a program and for a time seven nursings in 24 hours are about right. No more than this should be allowed.

At this age the infant should have at least one long nap of from four to six hours in the 24. With this expection it should be awakened at the regular nursing hours until 10 o'clock at night. From this hour until 6 the next morning it should be awakened only once for a nursing.

Within two or three weeks a healthy infant can be trained to nurse and sleep with perfect regularity. These habits once acquired are of great value to the child and greatly lessen the work of the mother.

After three months it is desirable that the number of nursings be decreased at night. In many cases it is advisable for the infant to go through the night without being disturbed at all.

Household Hints

A few drops of turpentine, added to the starch, will make collars and cuffs beautifully glossy.

When melted shortening is used in baking it is a good idea to melt it in the pan in which you expect to bake. It saves one more article to be washed and helps to grease your pan in the bargain.

One of the finest substitutes for cream in coffee may be made by beating up the yolk of an egg with a teaspoon of sugar and a very little water; divide it among the cups before pouring in the hot coffee.

Chinese Visitor Wants Madge to Give Up 'Box with Papers'

If one of the rabbits living in the garden suddenly had come up to me and demanded something in my possession, I should not have been more astounded than I was when the Chinese laundryman who had asked to see me demanded that I gave him "a box, papers inside." He was so poor a specimen of humanity, so harmless in appearance that the demand seemed utterly incongruous. One thing I saw clearly, however. No one was in any danger from this poor Chinese. That he was in mortal terror of something or somebody I knew from the furtive, anxious looks he cast toward the door. He evidently had been compelled to come to the farmhouse on this errand, but he had no zest in his task.

But though the man himself did not frighten me, the words he had spoken had a special sinister meaning for me. "A box, papers inside," could mean but one thing, I felt, and that was the lock box which Marion's dying grandmother had given her. Marion was but a tiny child at the time, but her poor old grandmother, though half senile, had so impressed the necessity of secrecy upon her that not for years had she shown the box or spoken of it, even to her mother.

Especially to her mother, I should have written, for Tom Morton's old mother, though left absolutely dependent upon Lillian, who gave her unflagging, devoted care, had so much loyalty to her motherless son, that she had carried even to her deathbed obedience to the mandate he evidently had laid upon her before he died that Lillian should know nothing of his affairs.

I brought myself back with an effort from the memories which this mention of the box had brought to me.

The Chinese was waiting for an answer, and from somewhere I pumped up the courage to give him one. In reality, I was dazed at the sudden right-about-face which my ideas had suffered. When Katie had given me the message that the man was in the kitchen waiting to see me, I had leaped to the conclusion that he had come as once before with news of Hugh Grantland, whose inexplicable silence had so worried me. But neither Hugh nor his high-born Chinese friend, Lee Chow, could have any possible knowledge or interest in the old lock-box. If by any wild chance, they could have known of it, I knew that neither of them would have sent me a message so imperative as this one appeared to be.

I faced the man steadily, made my voice stern in the effort to conceal the tremble which threatened to betray my apprehensions.

"What do you mean?" I demanded. "I have no box with papers. If I had one I should not give it to you."

He shrank back at my sternness, then stopped and eyed me steadily. I was reminded irresistibly of a rat I once had surprised in the kitchen in our early days at the farmhouse and which had hunched itself and looked at me with beady unwinking eyes masking terror such as I guessed was possessing the soul of the man before me.

"You no have box," he said, "but box here belong to girl. You no give to me, awful things happen."

"Who sent you here?" I asked. And at the question he looked from side to side as if seeking a place to which to run.

"I no want come here," he burst out at last, as if the words were forced from him. "Me, I good man. Flend Lee Chow do all he say. But he gone far away maybe never come back. Velly bad mens say come here, get box."

"What kind of men?" I persisted. "White men? Chinese?"

"No white men," he answered so quickly that I knew it had been an involuntary reply. If he had stopped to think, he would not have made it. To cover his slip he repeated his demand, but this time in a milder, more insinuating tone.

"You give me box, I go."

"I tell you I have no box. If I had, I would not give it to you. Go back to the men who sent you, and tell them I shall notify the police at once about this demand. If they dare to come near the farmhouse, they will be arrested. If you come here again, an officer will take you away."

He looked up at me with eyes that reflected a soul in torment.

"Me sorry," he said, "sorry for me, more sorry for you."

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Gifts for a Bride-to-Be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a young man's parents to give engagement gifts to the girl to whom he is engaged, and if so, what?

X. Y. Z.

Yes, it is good form for the parents of the family of a young man to give an engagement present to his fiancee; that indicates that they have a friendly and cordial relationship with her. The gift should be of a personal nature—that is, something for the bride herself and not for the new home. If there are several members in the family they might send the bride-to-be a dressing set, having her monogram on every piece. Other appropriate gifts are a silver or gold fountain pen, a gold pencil, a traveling clock, or a dresser clock, a set of her favorite books, monogrammed handkerchiefs, a vanity case, a piece of jewelry, a traveling bag or an evening bag.

A Form of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly let me know how one should introduce one's brother. Should I say "Mr. Blank, meet my brother Jack" or should I use my brother's last name?

Let me thank this newspaper and you for your kind service,

B. G.

That's a very polite and gracious sentence . . . and we both thank you.

I'm glad that you wrote me about a form of introduction, for I should very much like to urge you not to use this form that you are interested in. Never say, "meet——," in an introduction.

When you introduce your brother, it is well to use the form of introduction that is more or less reserved for family introductions, a form more informal than the usual introduction.

For instance, "Mr. Blank, this is my brother," or "Mr. Blank, this is my brother Tom." Or, "Mr. Blank do you know my brother Tom?" It isn't necessary to use the last name.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Off-the-face chapeaux were not designed for the poor dear who carries the lines of Time upon a faded countenance. The brimmed hat, be the awning ever so narrow, throws a kindly shadow, veils the evidences of birthdays, imparts an element of youthfulness and chic. The cloche is the most flattering hat shape that was ever handed over to the universal sisterhood, and now that the shops are full of them, the gals should be grateful that the millinery mills are turning them out again.

Dentists tell us that we should feed our teeth the kind of good grub that makes for the health and well-being of our oral pearls. They need vitamin C to combat the dangers of decay and pyorrhea, so to your daily menu add lettuce, raw cabbage, tomatoes, peas, spinach, apples, oranges and plenty of milk. Teeth like eggs, two soft boiled ones for breakfast will be appreciated by the little biters. Get a new toothbrush every six months. The old one harbors germs and germesses.

CHANCES SEEN AS FAVORING GERMAN

WITH THE HOUR of battle almost at hand, the outcome of the Schmeling-Stribling heavyweight championship debate appears more likely than ever to hinge on the competitive state of the Georgian's heart. If the challenger can break away from his old safety-first habits and show a will to win at any cost, regardless of any punishment he might receive in the attempt, he will have the better chance of the two to capture the decision. But if Stribling's usual lack of aggressiveness and his tendency to make self-protection the first consideration are again in evidence, the German will have an edge that ought to lead to victory.

George Blake

And the latter outcome looks to be the more probable. Though possessing the better Queensberry equipment in experience, boxing skill, speed and an attack that includes what the titleholder lacks, a good left hand, Stribling on past performances seems unlikely to display the stamina or offensive fire necessary to win. He is too fond of clinching and saving himself from being hurt.

UNLESS HE CAN step out of his old character of Willie the Clutch, and keep going after Schmeling begins to reach him, Stribling's chance to win will be confined to the early rounds. If he doesn't score a knockout there he is apt to lose out in the long run. The Georgian is practically certain to outpoint Max through his superior left hand and boxing ability in those first stages, but if he doesn't carry matters to a successful conclusion right then the tables are likely to be turned against him in the later sessions.

And the odds are against Stribling's putting over that necessary early kayo. There is nothing in his record to indicate that he will be able to do it. His total of 116 knockouts in 258 bouts isn't nearly so impressive as it sounds when you consider that there wasn't a first-class man among his victims. K. O. Christner was suspected of doing a Brodie, Otto Von Porat has a Dresden chin and nothing need be said about Phil Scott. The rest were nobodies and pushovers.

STOPPING SCHMELING WOULD be a tough job for maulers more formidable than Stribling. The Uhlan has a granite jaw that Jack Sharkey and others were unable to dent, and it is hard to see how the southerner can succeed where more aggressive fighters with as much or more punching power failed.

And Max has the heart as well as the physical ability to sop up punishment. He keeps coming right back for more, and the trait that discouraged Sharkey to the point where he resorted to fouling is not likely to increase the confidence of Stribling should the latter find that his blows are not having the desired effect.

SCHMELING'S STAMINA AND dogged determination may prove his winning assets tonight. He will be outclassed as a boxer, his left hand is almost a total loss, and as a fighting machine he does not compare with past champions. But he can take it in huge amounts, has a powerful right-hand punch that needs to travel only a short distance, and he gets better the longer the battle goes. Stribling has enough stuff to beat him if he had the fighting heart to back it up, but unless he has changed his ways, or Referee George Blake lets him get away with his holding and other questionable tactics, the chances appear to be that, after running in front for a time, Willie will be slowed down and outlasted by Schmeling, with the latter gaining the mastery after the fifth or sixth round and winning out.

Heinie Meine

IN PITCHING HIS second 1-to-0 victory of the year in Boston yesterday to wind up the Pirates' eastern trip with a win, Heinie Meine made more than an ordinary addition to the Buccaneers' "Won" column.

For that success marked the first time in five weeks that the Pirates won two games in succession. The last previous double win dated back to May 27 and 28, when the Cards were beaten twice in St. Louis. From that time until yesterday the Rovers played through 31 games without ever winning two in a row.

WHEN MEINE PITCHED the Picaroons to what was only their tenth victory in their last 32 contests, he wrote another chapter in an unusual record connecting him with the shutout operations of his club.

The Pirates have figured in seven shutouts up to date, and in no fewer than six of them Meine was their pitcher over the whole route. He blanked the Cardinals twice and the Braves once, while being defeated in the same way by the Cubs, Braves and Giants.

THE BUCS WERE in step with the other traveling western clubs in losing 10 out of 16 games in the National League's East-West series, which closes today with a Cardinal doubleheader in Philadelphia. None of the western teams registered as many victories as defeats, the four winning only 28 games against 40 for the East. The Cards, their lead now whittled to a game and a half, won eight and lost 10, with two more to be played today; the Cubs won seven and lost nine, and the Reds won seven and lost 11. The Robins led both sections with 13 victories and only four defeats. The Phillies won 10 and lost six, the Giants won nine and lost eight and the Braves won eight and lost 10.

THE INTERSECTIONAL SERIES in the American League was won by the East by the scant margin of two games, 34 to 32. The A's, who did not lose a game on their first western trip, dropped seven this time against nine won. The Yanks won 10 and lost eight, the Senators won eight and lost the same number, and the Red Sox won seven and lost nine.

The Browns were the suprise of the series, leading both divisions with 13 victories and only five defeats. The Indians were the only other western club with a margin on the right side, winning nine and losing seven. The Tigers won five and lost 10, and the White Sox won only four while losing 13.

JUDGING FROM THE distance that most of the entrants from this district fell behind the leaders in the first day's play for the national open golf championship at Toledo, there isn't much chance that the year will bring another open title to Pittsburgh to add to the one that Gene Sarazen won for the Highland club in 1922.

It was unusual to find four comparatively obscure starters tied for the lead at the end of the first 18 holes, but it is unlikely that any of them will be up there at the finish. Class and steadiness under the strain will tell from now on, with the veteran stars probably forging to the front.

Jack Root

IN THE DEATH of Lou Houseman at Los Angeles the man who established the light-heavyweight division in the fight game passed on. Jack Root, Chicago middleweight, found that it hurt him to make the weight limit of that class when he defeated Kid McCoy in Detroit on April 22, 1903, so Houseman, then Root's manager in addition to being a promoter, conceived the idea of a new division for fighters who were too heavy for the middles and too light for the heavies. He put up a belt for the 175-pound championship and matched Root with George Gardner, of Lowell, Mass., for the new title, Gardner winning in 12 rounds at Fort Erie on July 4, 1903. Bob Fitzsimmons took the championship from Gardner in November of the same year and later it passed to Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Tommy Burns and others.

WALTER CARDS PAR 35 ON OUT NINE

INVERNESS CLUB, Toledo, O., July 3.—(AP.)—Showing the way for the favorites in the second round of the United States open golf championship, Walter Hagen shot the outward nine in 35, even par, today. He was three strokes back of the leaders yesterday with a 74.

Hagen was very much on his game and gave the day's biggest gallery a succession of thrills. He was making par look easy, but got his only birdie at the 492-yard ninth, where he was on in two and barely missed his putt for an eagle.

Hagen was the first player of the day to hold par to even terms at the turn.

The heat wave was partially broken, but it was still hot and a brisk breeze was doing tricks with the balloon ball.

Guy Paulson, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., shot a fine 72, one over par, today, to take the early lead with a 36-hole total of 146.

Harry Cooper, Chicago, had a 151 total for second place among the early finishers.

Johnny Farrell, who started with a shaky 78 yesterday, staged a comeback on the first nine today with a great 34, one under par, to land three shots away from Hagen at the twenty-seventh hole.

W. H. Davies, British star, took a miserable 83 for his second round, 10 strokes over his previous score, and skidded pretty well out of the picture with a total of 156.

Jack Thompson, of the Tippecanoe Country Club, Youngstown, was disqualified this morning for having inadvertently signed the wrong score yesterday. He signed his card when it read 75, when actually he had recorded 76.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 3.—(AP.)—The West Penn team of the Morgantown American Legion Junior Baseball League defeated the Fairmont Post No. 17 team yesterday afternoon in the first of a six-game series to decide the title in District No. 2, department of West Virginia. The score was 5 to 2.

At Pitt, McClelland played fullback and quarterback. He was sub to George McLaren, all-America star in 1915 and 1916. In 1917 he played regularly at quarterback. In 1919 he played alongside of Jim Thorpe with the Canton Bulldogs.

Dr. McClelland is a personal friend of James F. Malone, director of the state department of supplies. Malone is said to have sponsored his appointment to the commission.

The dropping of Havey J. Boyle marks the passing of the last of the original three members of the State Athletic Commission, appointed eight years ago. The other members of the first commission were William A. Rocap, former Philadelphia sports writer, deceased, and Attorney Charles White, a Negro, of Philadelphia. White was succeeded by Harry Farrell and Rocap by Frank Weiner.

BOXERS BOTH PREDICT K. O. VICTORY

CLEVELAND, July 3.—(AP.)—Young Stribling believes he will win the world heavyweight championship by a knockout within five rounds.

Max Schmeling says he will retain his crown by knocking out Stribling within 10 rounds.

These were the pre-battle statements of the principals today.

"I am in perfect condition," Schmeling said, "and I never felt better in my life. I feel I will win and I will be happy then because I will have proved that I am a real champion. I can not and will not lose. My plan of battle is simple—just to keep punching until I stop him."

"I have seen Schmeling fight," Stribling said, "and do not underrate his ability, but I think I can beat him, and that championship looks mighty good to me after 10 years of boxing. I have no set plans for the fight. I have paid no attention to anything they have told me about Schmeling. I'll fight him the way I think best after I get in there."

It was the first time the two fighters had ever met before a microphone. They looked like a couple of college athletes on the night before a football game, instead of prize ring scrappers.

Schmeling and Stribling greeted each other cordially. "Hope you feel great," they wished each other, and in turn admitted that was exactly how they felt.

SECONDS SMART

Schmeling's chief second will be

Fans' Apathy Is Only Cloud in Fight Sky

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

CLEVELAND, July 3.—The day of Cleveland's "big"—if you have a sense of humor—fight for the heavyweight championship of the world between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling in the big and new stadium tonight, dawned bright and clear and gave promise of steaming up. There was not a cloud in the sky and there was nothing to worry about in the way of a postponement, anyway.

No one, not even the Madison Square Corporation of Ohio, which really is the New York Madison Square Garden, wants a postponement. The general sentiment appears to be that 'tis best to get this business out of the way and proceed with the holiday on the morrow.

Financial Bust

The boys were whooping it up in the downtown iced tea klatches until daylight appeared on the scene. The boys are the people who appear to be most vitally interested in tonight's shindy, the "experts," consisting of famous mangers, promoters, news hounds, fighters and sundry other folks who form this comeraderie throughout the land. They couldn't sleep and so they iced-teaed the night away as they aired their views of what has all of the earmarks of a glorious financial bust, the biggest and best since Gene Tunney and Tom Heeney kicked $300,000 out of the lining of the late Tex Rickard's wallet.

The general opinion seemed to be that this fight was all a mistake. The men never should have been matched if anyone hoped to make any money out of promoting the venture. The color and appeal of a big heavyweight championship extravaganza are missing. Schmeling, with his foul win of the title, and Stribling, with his unimpressive record in important battles, had the thing stymied from the start and nothing could be done to breathe life into it.

The boys seemed to think that a lot of things that have been done in the fair name of promoiotn have been all wet, too. They hit on the cutting of the prices of the $5 seats to $3 several days before the battle as a confession of weakness on the part of the promoters. They think a mistake was made in announcing the identity of the referee several days in advance and the trick of weighing the fighters in a broadcasting studio last night didn't go over well. There was a lot of confusion, with everybody trying to talk at once, and the last-minute "kick" was taken out of the preparations before the fans went to bed for their final nonchalant night of sleep with nothing to worry about.

MIRACLE NEEDED

Maybe the "experts" are right, and maybe they're wrong, but it is a fact that a miracle will have to happen to get this show out of the "red." The gate will have to go around $400,000 to liquidate all obligations, and it is far from that mark and the customers are not exactly knocking down one another in frantic assaults upon the box office. Rather, they are holding off in anticipation of further slashes in ticket prices before the heavies climb into the ring.

Gene Tunney, the last of the legitimate line of heavyweight champions, is here for the fight. So is One-Eyed Connelly.

CROWDS INVADE CLEVELAND FOR TITLE BOUT

ance, no matter where it is staged, are on hand, but if this show had to depend upon them for support it would be a mocking herald of depression.

There is no guarantee, even, that the small fry among the fans who will be in the majority will constitute a sufficiently large majority to make this thing a financial success. But the enthusiasm is growing hourly, and, with the principals bivouacked hard by the arena, there is enough fight talk and speculation to color the scene.

Yes, it is fight day in Cleveland, there is no mistaking that. The signs are everywhere. While the employed Clevelanders go about their appointed tasks, the visitors gathered in the heart of the town, in the hotel lobbies, clubs, sidewalks and other meeting places leave no doubt of the fact that something out of the ordinary is about to occur.

This fight that was run out of New York and Chicago and finally was welcomed here with open arms has caught on after a fashion and the air is electric with fight talk. It is Cleveland's biggest fistic moment and there may never be another like it, for heavyweight championship matches do not wind up in the ninterlands more than once or twice in a lifetime.

BETTING ODDS SWITCH

The eleventh-hour betting has switched to Schmeling, as it was bound to veer. The betting fraternity all along has held Stribling the favorite at 7 and 6 to 5, but it is tradition that the champion, except in cases where he is known to be outclassed or all washed up, shall enter the ring the favorite to win. The percentage is all in his favor. Few referees or judges will vote against him unless the challenger has clearly demonstrated his superiority. In other words, in a close fight they will give him the

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Pirates arrived in Pittsburgh this morning after a very fast trip from Boston. Winning a 1-to-0 slab clash with the Braves at the New England metropolis yesterday, the Freebooters hurried to a New York-bound train. A special connection with a mail train was effected on Manhattan and the trip resumed to the home port. Today is open on the card of the Buccaneers. The home team will take on the Cardinals tomorrow in the Glorious Fourth games. Play will begin at 10:30 in the morning and at 3 in the afternoon.

Heinie Meine and Howie Groskloss threw a blanket of sorrow on the Tribe in the closing fracas in Boston. Heinie of Luxemburg handed the Braves nine nice goose eggs, while the smart collegian from Sheraden made the Pirate run possible in the fourth with a fine burst of speed. Rabbit Maranville, on a wonderful play, all but frustrated Howie on the dash.

CUNNINGHAM LOSES

Adam Comorosky should receive a lot of credit for the Pirate success, for after all it was the Polish Flyer who scored the only tally of the game, and he had to do his winged foot trick to get the marker over.

Commy singled in the fourth with two out and he lost little time in swiping the middle bag. Spohrer's throw to Maguire was wide and Commy hustled along to third.

The alert Rabbit played Groskloss for a leftfield drive and as usual he was right. The collegian slapped an ordinary single toward the left garden, but Maranville out in the grass nailed the ball in his bare hand. Groskloss dove into first and got the decision as Comorosky registered the important tally.

Maranville failed as he tried to sacrifice, but a moment later he almost scuttled the Pirate ship. He slipped a lazy fly to right that fell only a few feet on the foul side of the line. Then he came back and popped to Phillips.

MEINE FANS BERGER

Comorosky rushed over the foul line to haul in Red Worthington's high loft, but with two out there was considerable concern in the Pittsburgh's dugout, for Home Run Walter Berger had yet to be consulted. With the count two and two on the slugger, Meine broke over a delightful hook which Berger missed.

There is a chance that Manager Ens will force a double dose of southpaw pitching on the National League champions tomorrow. Ens is sure to use Larry French in one of the contests and he rather leans towards Charlie Wood for the other. He also considers Remy Kremer.

ROYSTONS COP GOLF TITLE

The Roystons, J. R. and J. R., Jr., captured the Highland Country Club's father and son golf championship, which has been in progress this week. The Roystons turned in a card of 36-38—74.

The Parks, Sam, Sr., and Sam, Jr., were champions in 1930, but with Sam, Jr., competing in the national open tournament at Toledo, they were unable to defend their laurels.

the moocher. And so are Anton Cermak, Chicago's Mayor; Trevor Wignall, the famous English boxing writer; K. M. Landis, Bobby Jones, Walter P. Chrysler, Charles Francis Coe, the author; Primo Carnera, Mrs. Tex Rickard, Will Hayes, M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company; Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion; Gen. John V. Clinin, president of the National Boxing Association, and numerous other notables.

The stadium was formally dedicated with a mammoth concert last night, and the local citizens are proud of their plant.

Stribling is being credited with having earned the first round of the battle for the title when he met Schmeling at the weighing-in ceremonies in the broadcasting studio last night. As the men appeared dressed as they will enter the ring, Max Strib gave Maxie the eye, looking him over fore and aft and making the comparison. Schmeling soon started his good (?) act, only he had the stomp on for a scathing time, but it may not mean anything, as this instance because of Schmeling's recognized phlegmatic disposition.

Most of the scribes are picking Stribling to win. Some of them can't tell why—they just like him, that's all.

BLAKE CAUTIOUS

George Blake, of California, manager of Fidel LaBarba, arrived in town yesterday and, as was anticipated, he planned to confer with the principals and their managers today, to go completely over the rules. He doesn't want to be put on the spot, through any misunderstanding.

Blake is held in high regard as a capable official and action is not unlike that of the scribes, who, being a less athletic lot than the over-trained tars in the ring, insists on meeting the referee. Jack Dempsey was a loser in California some years ago, and was under Blake's management. Later Blake refereed a bout in which he (Jack) participated and didn't like it any the better, as it from Blake. Still later he became a manager of boxers and one night he moved out to the center of the ring with Rickard and other officials before the bell, and Blake was on the job as referee of that melee.

Boxing is maybe a psychological impression on the opposing boxer, and not wishing to reveal his close connection in the past with Blake, Mr. Manager asked:

"What do we do, Mr. Blake, when my man knocks down that other fellow?"

"Old stuff, Billy," shot back Blake. "Shut up, go to your corners and tell your men to come out fighting."

Blake is one of the old school referees who do not touch the fighters unless one of them is hurt and is hanging on in the clinches. Jimmy Bronson, who handled Gene Tunney in both of the latter's fights with Jack Dempsey and also in his last stand with Tom Heeney, and himself a former star referee, said he had heard so much about Blake's refereeing that he was looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to seeing him perform tonight. Bronson by the way is about to come back as a manager of fighters after having been out of the picture for about a year. He is building a new stable.

Paulino and Baer Set for Reno Bout

RENO, Nev., July 3.—(AP.)—Under a blazing Nevada sun yesterday, Paulino Uzcudun and Max Baer puffed through short workouts to end training for their 20-round prize fight here tomorrow.

Advance ticket sales have led Jack Dempsey, promoter, to believe the bout will play to a gate of between $70,000 and $100,000. The former figure will enable Dempsey to at least break even on expenses.

Uzcudun and Baer will weigh in today at the Silver State Jockey Club. The main bout will begin about 12:30 p. m. (PCT.)

FITZGERALD RELEASED

HAZLETON, Pa., July 3.—Jerry Fitzgerald, of Pittsburgh, has been released by the local New York-Pennsylvania League club. He is a brother of Hubert Fitzgerald, manager of the club, and an outfielder.

Today's events include competition for lower class men; competition for lower class women; competition for higher class of women; competition for higher class of men; competition for junior boys and girls, and a dance at the Slovak National Hall, in White street, McKeesport.

DUQUESNE GOLF LINKS READY

The permanent course of the nine-hole Duquesne Golf Club links is to be opened at a formal dedication tomorrow afternoon. Duquesne has been using a temporary course, and it will be the first time that members there have had the opportunity of utilizing the regular layout.

The links is 3,200 yards, and par 36. The greens are large, running from 4,000 to 7,000 square feet.

Fred Pirl, president, will be in charge of ceremonies, assisted by Fred Hunker, chairman of the grounds committee, and Edward Robertson, chairman of the golf committee.

RACERS SEEK TO QUALIFY AT ALTOONA

By JESS CARVER

Some 450 miles of automobile racing are scheduled for tomorrow afternoon for Western Pennsylvania tracks, with the A. A. A. championship events at Tipton Bowl, Altoona, Pa., receiving the major play from district speed enthusiasts.

Four 25-mile events and a main race of 100 miles are carded at Altoona, with the cream of the nation's racing drivers entered. Clarion and Arden Downs, Washington, Pa., each have 100-mile dirt track events listed and the Monongahela Speedway offers a 50-mile race.

BOST DOES 117

Unless some pilot today bests his time of 117 miles per hour, made yesterday before rain put a stop to qualifying tests at Altoona, Paul Bost, of Texas, the lone Dixie entrant, will get the position in the big race tomorrow. Eighteen drivers will be permitted to start in the century chase, with some 21 eligible for the four 25-mile sprints.

Following Bost yesterday came Milt Jones, of Cleveland, who was clocked at 113 miles per. The times assure the two of making the qualifying grade, with Bost having an excellent chance of hanging up the best test time.

Luminaries of the class of Freddie Frame, Freddie Winnai, Tony Gulotta, Lou Moore, Wilbur Shaw, Ralph Hepburn, Jimmy Gleason, Speed Gardner, Frank Brisko, Al Aspen, Johnny Seymour and Lou Schneider, who won the 500-mile Indianapolis grind Memorial Day, will take to the boards today for qualifying tests.

ENTRIES FAST

Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., a veteran driver, filed his entry last night and will attempt to qualify today. Litz gave Billy Arnold, the 1930 speed champion, two great duels at the Tipton Bowl last year.

Judging from the class of cars entered, it will take better than 100 miles per hour for 10 miles to get into the select field.

The races tomorrow will start promptly at 1:30, with the main chase slated to get under way at 3.

MAXIE, STRIB AWAIT BELL

benefit of the doubt, on the theory that championships do not grow on trees and are not won every night in the week, and a man good enough to win one deserves some consideration when it comes to defending the bauble. On this reckoning, Schmeling will enter the ring tonight a slight favorite to retain his title.

STRIB MUST WIN EARLY

So far as that goes, it is generally conceded that Stribling's main chance to win lies in shooting the works for an early knockout. Schmeling is a good man over a route and is at his best in the last half of a 15-round battle, while Stribling, for all of his vast experience, has been known to almost invariably falter in the pinches. A consensus of opinion among the better-posted ring authorities is that if this battle goes the full distance it will be a messy thing after the early rounds, with Schmeling doing what fighting is done and Stribling running true to form and concentrating on defensive tactics and trying to keep the champion from fighting his fight by resorting to his familiar clinching and wrestling tactics. Just why a man fighting for the biggest prize in his chosen profession should do such a thing is almost beyond comprehension, but the ringworms profess to know their Stribling.

The men will be within a few pounds of each other in weight when they enter the ring, Schmeling scaled 189 pounds and Stribling 186½ when they weighed in last night, and they are primed as a result of their weeks of labor in their respective training camps. They are ideally built for heavyweights, not too big and not too slow. They are due to clamber into the ring at approximately 11 o'clock, Pittsburgh daylight saving time, and the fight will be broadcast all over the world by long and short wavelengths.

PANKA IN PRELIMINARY

Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, a former contender in the heavyweight ranks, meets stubby and chubby Tony Galento, of Newark, N. J., in the eight-round semi-final, which will follow the main bout.

George Panka, of Homestead, a star sparring partner of Maxie, will meet Frankie Cawley, of Scranton, Pa., one of Stribling's spar mates and a protege of Tommy Loughran, former light-heavyweight champion, in one of a number of five-round preliminaries.

George Blake, of Los Angeles, manager of Fidel LaBarba, former flyweight champion, and one of the star referees of the sport, will be the third man in the ring tonight. The decision will be made by two judges. In the event they disagree, the referee's decision will be consulted and it will be final. There can be no draw and the special rules for this fight stipulate that it cannot end in a foul.

Several thousand fans from the Pittsburgh district will be on hand, coming in special trains and by automobile. Many of them are here already.

MAX ACCIDENTAL CHAMPION

Schmeling won recognition as the champion when he was declared the victor on a foul over Jack Sharkey in the fourth round of their battle in the Yankee Stadium, New York, a year ago, after being hopelessly outclassed and beaten up to that time. Although he is recognized as a more or less accidental champion, Maxie's ruggedness and fighting and punching qualities have found him more supporters in the impending contest than the more brilliant, but more uncertain, capabilities of his challenger have been able to muster for the latter.

BOXERS BOTH PREDICT K. O.

"Pa" Stribling, father-manager of the challenger, will act as the young Georgian's chief second. He will be aided by Bob Smith, of New York, who has handled many famous boxers, and Nate Lewis, matchmaker for the Chicago Stadium and close friend of Stribling.

HOMEWOOD AND DORMONT IN TESTS

By TOM BIRKS

At least one change will be made in the City League schedule for this evening. The North Side Civics have asked for postponement of their game with Homewood at the Playgrounds and Manager Daly is to bring the Book Shoe aggregation to the East End.

Many of the Civic players, including Art Rooney, Jimmy Rooney and Harp Vaughan, are making the trip to Cleveland to see the fight, so the postponement was requested.

It is reported that radical changes are to be made in some of the club rosters for the second-half fight. Ray Burke, the popular St. Vincents boy, will play in the infield for Homewood and Westfall has been signed to bolster the pitching staff. This is probably the forerunner of other changes in the East End team.

BOOKS' LINEUP CHANGED

Book Shoe cut loose from Bobby Allebaugh, Ottie Cochran and Choike, while Dave Black has been signed, and it seems a certainty that Jiggers Welsh will run the outfit in the second half. Book Shoe officials have a distinct liking for Welsh's judgment, and since Dormont has made all the clubs in the loop look weak, the change will go into effect.

Out Pleasant Valley way Manager Johnny Dunsky has decided that a keen head in the infield is to be desired in City League warfare, so in the second half, Andy Swetonic will play second base and run the club on the field. Josh and Bill Briley will not be with the club and Dave Blackstock also has been released, and there is a feeling that Yost will be with the club.

So with Homewood meeting Book Shoe and the Dormont Club hooking up with the North Side Bucks tonight the title fight will be on.

In the West Penn League, Reliance Life and Homestead Aces are still trying to decide that championship. The Insurance boys go to the Hill district this evening to meet the Griffins. Manager Americus has announced that Zezegolli will pitch.

MARTINS FACE SAINTS

In the other game, the Martins, of Garfield, hook up with the St. Joachim nine at Moultrie Park.

In the Steel City League, the East End Cardinals meet the St. Elizabeth nine at Leslie Park. This game, if won by the Saints, carries with it the first-half title.

MILLVALE BOUTS OFF AGAIN

Efforts to put on the Buck McTiernan-Ted Yarosz boxing show at Hickey Park, Millvale, were balked by a downpour for the second successive time last night and it was announced that the card, intact, will go over to next Thursday night. This is due to the fact that the Schmeling-Stribling heavyweight championship battle is carded in Cleveland tonight and the Meyers Bowl has its weekly card listed for next Monday night.

Eugene Huat, the French star, who meets Mose Butch in the 10-round main bout of the Bowl show, will arrive in town Sunday, accompanied by his manager, the famous Gus Wilson, former trainer of both Georges Carpentier and Jack Dempsey. Huat is finishing his training at Wilson's health farm, Orangeburg, N. Y.

McTiernan will meet Donald Fogg, of Terre Haute, Ind., in the main bout of an open-air show in a new arena at Huntington, W. Va., tomorrow afternoon.

Eddie McEntee, city detective and manager of boxers, has taken over the management of the Twenty-seventh Ward Athletic Club, North Side, and one of his first moves in his new position was to change the amateur fight nights to Tuesday. Previous shows have been held on Monday.

MARTIN CLUB OPEN

The Martin Club, of Garfield, has Sunday open for a game at home or abroad. Any first-class team desiring a good attraction call Montrose 3151.

Says Nick Altrock

—Baseball's Comedian—

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—The knuckle world series is played in Cleveland tonight and if the scalpers are loaded up with tickets they can eat them for Saturday morning's breakfast. The fight business is shot full of so many holes the bees could use it for a honeycomb. That's the difference between eight-ounce gloves and catcher's mitts in a depression. Baseball attendance is swell at most major league stands and if people are broke they must be using forged rain-checks for money. Another reason the fight hasn't started a conflagration is that Stribling vs. Schmeling is like the Cincinnati Reds meeting the Toledo Mud Hens in a world series. You can't sell the public veal just by calling it a chicken sandwich.

Peter Thompson Questions Thad About Kitty

CHAPTER VIII.

When I felt the stones and sod give way beneath my feet and knew that I was slipping down over the cliff, I screamed with mingled fright and horror.

But above my shrill scream I heard the agonized shout of warning from Thad.

A warning seemed too late, then.

I clutched blindly and felt a sharp pain in my knee.

Something was stopping me from falling farther. I looked down to see what it was, and closed my eyes in terror.

I couldn't see what slight thing was holding me, but I could see the great jagged rocks among the scattered trees far below, so far that the sight sickened me.

And then a strong grasp on both of my wrists.

"You are all right, dear, you are all right now," he was saying as he lifted me up.

"Put your knee on that edge—there," and as he spoke he released one wrist and put his arm around me under my arms, lifting me back to the top of the ledge.

"Are you going to faint? I've a little brandy in a flask," he said, as he kept his arm about me and led me over toward the hamper.

"I'm not going to faint now. I felt like it when I looked down."

I stopped and stared at him. I felt my face burn. Half of my skirt was torn off and I stood revealed in little pink silk bloomers.

Then I laughed.

"There's no use being modest, Thad—here I am, half undressed, and it isn't my fault, but how on earth am I going to get home?"

WOULD HAVE FOLLOWED

Thad looked at me. "Kitty, you are a corker—just a corker, to take it that way. Don't worry about getting home. You can wear my top coat when we go into some country store around here. You can pick up some sort of a dress, good enough to get you home—look, you've cut your knee!"

And so I had. I remembered feeling the pain.

"First aid and then some eats," Thad was talking rapidly to cover up his own fright. He hadn't got his color back yet.

He brought cushions from the car and with a handkerchief and some brandy from his flask he washed the dirt out of the cut.

"The brandy is a good antiseptic," he declared. It certainly made my knee burn like fire.

Then he opened up the containers and we began to eat. All sorts of dainties had been put up, cold chicken, cold meats, jellies, bread and butter ready. I was all over my fright by this time.

Thad stopped suddenly and put his arm about me.

"Kit—if—if you'd gone over there I would have gone after you," he said.

"Why, Thad, what good would that have done?"

"I can't help it—that's just the way I feel—you know I'm crazy about you," and then and there I got my first kiss from Thad Parsons. I hoped he didn't hear or feel my heart thumping. I was so happy right then. I knew that Thad loved me. I felt that I had won him!

"You do care for me, don't you, Kitty?"

"I don't fly into a rage every time I see you, you precious old dear," I answered.

Another kiss.

PATCH DRESS

"I am certainly glad no one is here. I must be an awful sight with a bound-up bloody knee and half a skirt," I said, as we had resumed eating.

"You couldn't be anything except a beautiful sight—and we are going to be mighty happy, aren't we, dearest?"

"I hope so," I said, honestly.

Already I could see, in my imagination, a solitaire on my engagement finger.

Thad went over and examined the place where I had fallen. If I had remained on the ledge all would have been well, but I had stepped over some sod and the stones beneath had washed out so that it gave way. Thad began to laugh and lay down flat, reaching down and hauling up the half of my skirt that had torn off. It had held me for a moment, and when he hauled me up it had torn completely off, but I was too frightened to notice it then.

"If I had a needle and thread now——"

"I've got plenty of adhesive tape in the car. Will that do?" I said I would try it.

"If you promise not to faint, Thad, what's left of my dress is coming off—I assure you I have plenty on."

So I slipped out of the wrecked dress and together, with adhesive tape, we patched the torn part so that it would do.

"When you go into your home carry my coat over your arm; it will hang down and cover up the torn side; and it will be dark, anyway. I think I ought to get you a new dress, since I ruined that one."

"It isn't being done—not for me—I buy my own clothes, Thad, and intend to until—until—well, in case I was married I might permit my husband to buy them—in fact, I'd like to see a husband of mine avoid buying me plenty of clothes."

"Very well, Miss Independence!"

The sky turned to purple and gold before we packed up that hamper. For hours we drove slowly in the starlight. I had never been quite so happy.

When Thad brought me home I thought I got a glimpse of Peter Thompson standing across the street, but wasn't sure of it. I felt sorry for him, but he would get over it; there were plenty of other girls and what a fool I would be to give up such a wonderful catch as Thad Parsons!

EXPECTS PROPOSAL

And so on Sunday, the next day, when Peter came over, I told him I didn't want to go anywhere. He was disappointed and only stayed a little while.

"Going to take that new job tomorrow?" he asked before he left.

"Try and stop me—think of the money it pays, Peter."

"Money isn't everything, Kitty."

"Someone said that before, but, just the same, money has always cut quite a figure in everyone's life—a lot of people still seem interested in it. What are you working for?"

"For a good trade, so as to make money enough to give you a good home, Katie, when you get over this nonsense and are ready to marry me."

"Oh, Peter, don't talk about marriage—I'm not at all sure of—of anything."

"Meaning me?"

"I don't know, Peter, I don't know," was all I could say. I hadn't the courage to tell him that I fully expected to marry rich Thad Parsons.

It was a week later that Thad took me to a night club. We had been down on Long Island visiting Curt Lawlor and his wife, friends of Thad. He brought me home so that I could change my dress.

That was how Peter Thompson found out where I was and whom I was with, for I had mentioned to Cora that Thad was taking me to this place.

The dancing there was clever, the show by the dancing girls, I mean, and there was a fine orchestra and room enough on the floor for our own dancing.

Thad bought champagne and, after a sip, advised me not to drink it.

"It's fake stuff, it won't hurt you and it won't do you any good, but a chap has to buy if he gets any attention here," he told me.

All this time I was wondering when Thad would actually propose. That he would do so I was absolutely sure. He was of age—nearly 30. In fact, he had his own fortune and wasn't dependent on his people. All in good time he would ask me and there was going to be only one answer—an answer that would begin with a "Yes" and end with a kiss!

PETER QUESTIONS THAD

It must have been around 2 o'clock, and I caught sight of Peter Thompson sitting at a small table over by the wall, all alone. It gave me a start. Was he watching me? What right did he have to do that? I'd have to hurt his feelings if he started to make any trouble. I'd have to tell him outright to go away and let me alone, that he had no claim on me and never would have.

He caught me looking at him. To my relief he smiled.

Peter rather surprised me. He wore dinner clothes. I didn't even know he owned any. He looked rather nice, with his wavy black hair and his red cheeks.

A little later, when I was coming from the rest room, I saw Peter and Thad stepping into a little hall where there were telephone booths. What on earth could they talk about? Myself, undoubtedly. I decided to find out. If Peter started any rough stuff I wanted to be there to tell him right in front of Thad that I wouldn't marry him, that I was never really engaged to him. I couldn't take any chances on losing Thad.

"What can I do for you?" I heard Thad ask. Evidently Peter had asked him out there.

"I want to know only one thing, Mr. Parsons—what are your intentions toward Kitty—Miss Mason?"

The nerve of Peter!

"Why do you want to know?" Thad asked.

"Because I love her. If your intentions are honorable and she prefers you, that lets me out, but if you are just playing around with her, by—, you'll be sorry!"

Synopsis

Katherine Mason leaves her position in a department store to become a dress model. She doesn't want to marry Peter Thompson because he is poor and she believes a girl's chief aim in life should be to play around and have a good time. Thad Parsons, a wealthy society youth, becomes deeply interested in Katherine, to her great delight and high hopes. Out on a picnic with Thad, Katherine is startled and slips over the edge of a high cliff.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Cure

Woman Promises to Quit Nagging Husband

The man across the street backed his car out of the garage and stopped it at the side door.

A plump, smiling woman came out. The man opened the car door for her, reached out and helped her in and then he kissed her.

I observed to my sister that they were newlyweds.

My sister and her husband laughed.

"They've been married about 12 years; they have a boy of 10 who has just gone to a summer camp," my sister said.

It was the first time I had visited my sister and her husband at their home. Heretofore I had been unable to get away and they had made several trips out West to visit me.

Anna, my sister, excused herself and went in to see Pearl about dinner. Pearl was very dark, very efficient and very slow.

"Tell him about the Carsons," Anna said as she was going in.

The Carsons, my brother-in-law said as he launched into the story, are the people across the street you mistook for newlyweds. Anna and I had been living here about a year when they married and bought that new bungalow over the way.

I knew Chet Carson quite well. In fact, we're brother lodge members. We welcomed him and Carrie—Carrie is his wife. We were glad to have them for neighbors.

"We're going to be a mighty happy couple, Hal," Chet said to me when they moved in, "and it's great to be neighbors. I'm sure your wife will like Carrie, one couldn't help liking her, she's so even tempered, always smiling, always pleasant."

WIFE WAS RIGHT

I told him that I was glad he was so fortunate. I mentioned what he said to Anna. Anna had never met Mrs. Carson until they moved in.

"I hope he's right, Hal, but I'm alway suspicious of the constantly smiling, happy, women. They are like a coat of housepaint, for outside show. Of course I hope I'm wrong, but the chances are Chet won't find her always smiling and pleasant when they are in private."

Well, I didn't argue with Anna. You know what a darn smart sister you have, Jerry, smartest of your family, my brother-in-law said.

I said, "Thanks," and he laughed, but refused to change his statement.

Of course, Hal went on, I had a feeling that perhaps Anna had just heard that said somewhere and thought it applied to everyone. But I'll be darned if she wasn't right.

Yes, sir, before they'd been living there a month we heard her scolding him, the regulation old-fashioned nagging, over little things.

Anna and I were out here one evening. Chet was watering his lawn. Carrie came rushing out to him.

"Look here, Chet Carson," we heard her say, in a shrill and far from pleasant or "company" tone of voice, "Do you think I want to slave day in and day out washing windows? You got water on the dining room window, it will streak the glass."

REVIEW EVENING

We didn't hear what Chet said, but it sounded rather apologetic and soothing.

We heard this often. Little things like leaving the screen door open for a moment, or stepping out in his slippers and a hundred and one such trivialities.

One evening when Anna and I were over there having a game of bridge we counted exactly 11 silly little things that she nagged him about. It had reached the stage where she didn't wait for privacy to nag him. This time she gave him a regulation bawling out because he brought on the cocktails in the plain cocktail glasses and she was serving the refreshments on green plates. She wanted the cocktails served in their green glasses.

"It's downright dumb of you or else you are trying to shame me," she scolded him.

"These won't poison us even if they are in plain glasses, my dear," Chet said, mildly.

She went at him again. He did it deliberately to annoy her, she insisted.

When Anna and I got home I began to count up the little things that caused Chet's wife to scold and nag him. Then I remembered what Anna had said about the always cheerful and pleasant women in public being the opposite in private.

I told her that she called the trick.

"I knew it—I know the type. Poor Chick."

Yes, sir, Hal went on, Chet was having no bed of roses. They'd been married more than a year when Chet and I were walking home from the lodge.

I asked him how everything was going. I meant in a business way. Chet is a contractor. He said things were going straight to the hot place, that he was fed up with matrimony and that when he told me how happy he was going to be he had talked like an ignorant ape.

"I don't know what to do," he said.

"Carrie'd be wonderful if it wasn't for nagging. I wish I knew a cure for it this side of the grave," poor Chet said.

I assured him that I was no oracle.

It was some weeks later that I went over to Chet's place with some poppy plants, more than I had room for. I hesitated, for I heard him talking to his wife around at the back door.

"What a dumb fool I was to sprinkle the door mat," he was saying and he spoke rapidly and vehemently. "It was downright stupid of me; don't see how I could have done it—inexcusable, getting the mat wet, dumb, terrible."

"Yes, but—"

That was as far as his wife got.

"No buts about it, no excuse, awful thing for me to do," and he rattled on for two minutes.

I came along and gave him the plants and went back home to try and ponder it.

When we were over again for some bridge Chet came in with some highballs. He was muttering.

"Did a terrible thing just now," he said. "Spilled some of the highball on the linoleum, made a wet spot—may make a stain—awful—stupid blunder, no sense to it—"

"Come on, let's play," Carrie said, nervously.

Right in the midst of the game Chet spoke up. "I can't get my mind off slopping that drink in the kitchen, so stupid, makes a horrible mess, I can't forgive myself——"

"Chet, please, I bid two diamonds, what do you do?" his wife asked.

Well, all through the evening he scolded himself about slopping the drink.

SCOLDS HIMSELF

"There—that's outrageously clumsy," he said. "I'm sure I'll never be forgiven—ashes don't hurt anybody, but they're gritty and dusty and make extra labor—just downright careless, can't forgive myself," and on and on until I was getting sore and Anna was getting nervous.

"Oh, come on, Chet," his wife said. "Anna won't mind. I'll bet her husband drops ashes now and then."

"I'll bet he don't. I'll bet I'm the most careless, downright sloppy, thoughtless man in existence. Only yesterday I let three flies into the kitchen, holding the screen door open to make change for the paper boy—I'm forever doing some terrible thing like that."

We finally got the game started but Chet stopped to scold himself a dozen times about the cigar ashes, once right in the middle of a game where he had bid five spades and I had doubled him. His wife was as nervous as a cat about it, afraid he would forget what had been played.

I said to Anna that night, "Chet's gone daffy, hasn't he?"

Anna laughed. "Perhaps he has and then again perhaps he has gone wise all of a sudden."

I laughed at her in derision, and told her there was nothing wise about making such a sickening damn nuisance of yourself as Chet was doing of late.

Chet seemed to be the meekest, most timid man I ever saw, forever scolding himself. He dropped a flower pot and before Carrie could say a word he began to yelp about what a clumsy lout he was. He berated himself for five minutes until his wife, very much troubled, said, "But Chet dear, a flower pot costs only a dime and we have 40 more than we can ever use."

He said it was the principle of the thing and scolded himself constantly all the time we were working with his wisteria frame that I was helping him put up.

PLAN DISCLOSED

He wanted to buy a drink, as he put it, meaning to go in to his place and get one.

He put his cigar on the kitchen window sill where it burned the paint, he broke a glass, slopped ginger ale and dropped chunks of ice.

"You're going to get it," I said, half playfully.

I asked what the cure was.

"The hair of the dog that bit me—in other words, I started in nagging myself before Carrie could open her mouth, I used to slop and break things purposely so I could nag myself. I have been known to nag myself steadily for three hours because I crumpled up a cigar band and dropped it on the floor—she's fed up now. She has sworn never to nag again as long as she lives if I'll just lay off nagging myself—"

Carrie came down just then, kissed Chet, smiled at me, began to pick up the broken glass and clean up and joined us in a drink, standing with her arm about Chet. Jerry and my brother-in-law turned to me. If ever you get married remember that cure—it's a corker.

A Conference on Coal

There Is Stronger Likelihood Now Than Formerly That a Parley Will Accomplish Something.

The administration at Washington has decided to call a conference on July 9 to study the ills of the coal industry, as suggested by John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Lewis desired such a parley three years ago, but was unable to get it because of the suspicion of the coal operators.

The operators at that time had just severed contractual relations with the union and were preparing to run "open shop." The "open shop" Southern West Virginia operators were making money and their northern competitors thought they could do so, too, by following the same policy.

But conditions have gone from bad to worse, and not even the southern operators are making money now. Moreover, while the United Mine Workers was dealt a severe blow, the radical National Miners Union has sprung up to harass the operators.

This seems to be a propitious time for a parley.

How to Cut Expenses

Reduction of Wages Is One Way, But Elimination of Waste Is a Better Method.

Because of the industrial depression, many Pittsburgh concerns find it imperative to reduce expenses. One way is to cut wages, but a better way is to eliminate waste.

This thought is suggested by the astonishing record that is being made by the Pennsylvania Railroad. Nearly every month it announces some really remarkable reduction in expenses accomplished through elimination of waste and increase in efficiency.

For instance, during May only one car of produce out of 4,280 received at the Pennsy's Produce Terminal at Pittsburgh missed the market. If a car misses the market—that is, is not received at the terminal at the appointed time—and the produce rots or the market price drops, the railroad company, which guarantees to deliver fruit and vegetables at the terminal platform at a certain time, has to pay damages.

During the first five months of last year 995 cars missed the market, as compared with 118 missing the market in the corresponding period this year. The number of cars received was about the same this year as last.

Damage claims arising from missing the market were $40,000 less in May, 1931, than in May, 1930, and during the first five months showed a reduction of $191,890 from the amount for the corresponding period of last year. The company hopes to save half a million dollars this year by increased efficiency in this one item alone. And the saving is attributed to nothing else but the loyal co-operation of the employes in a determined effort to get the cars to the terminal on time.

There is hardly a large concern which does not have to pay in operating expenses for waste and inefficiency. Now is a particularly good time to appeal to employes to eliminate them.

Celebrate Safely

Better Omit Fireworks; But If You Do Use Them Have Some Consideration for Your Neighbors.

Fireworks, even the little firecrackers, are dangerous, and have been outlawed in many cities. The Mayor's majority in City Council has seen fit to authorize their use in Pittsburgh tomorrow. But it is to be hoped that Independence Day will be celebrated in some other way, safely.

If you do use fireworks, have some consideration for your neighbors, and do not set them off at places where they will disturb sick people. The wife of a veteran puts in a plea, in a letter to the Sun-Telegraph, for shell-shocked soldiers, who, she says, suffer acutely from the noise of Fourth of July firecrackers.

If you go automobiling tomorrow, don't become impatient and try to pass other cars on crowded roads. And don't drive if you are drowsy. Violation of these rules is responsible for many accidents, and the Fourth is becoming almost as notorious for motor mishaps as for fireworks casualties.

Adieu, Wickershamers!

Prohibition Found to Be a Failure, But Prospect of a Solution Is Not in Sight.

The life span of the Wickersham Commission came to an end Wednesday.

We think on the whole it has done useful work. Its investigations have been broad in scope.

When its main report was filed, the public felt a natural irritation at the discrepancies between the main body of the commission's findings and the unfortunately worded summary which was issued at the same time.

This naturally called forth sharp criticism which for a time obscured the many valuable features of the commission's report.

Its work will be regarded as a distinct contribution toward the toilsome task of extricating the country from the grievous woes that have resulted from the effort to ENFORCE AN UNENFORCEABLE LAW.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION IS A FAILURE.

So the commission finds, and an INTELLIGENT PUBLIC OPINION throughout the country ECHOES THE VERDICT.

But still the country waits—although the harm is felt, the causes known, and the facts certified.

The palsied political mind is still mumbling to itself, "Wet-dry," "dry-wet," and can lift itself to no higher conception than a wet candidate for the presidency on a dry platform, or, as the case may be, a dry candidate on a wet platform.

COMPROMISE, MUDDLE AND RETREAT!

Good Heavens, Man, the Child!!

(Copyright, 1931.)

Your blood freezes at this sight in spite of the heat. And then astonishment seizes you. Watch—could it be POSSIBLE that the little girl has been married before, and the child is really her own, although she calls him "adopted?"

Luckily, this dear little mother, or adopted mother, whichever you care to believe, cannot hear what old Uncle Sam is saying to himself.

He is saying: "That kid of yours is as good as dead, anyhow. Leave me alone while I try to save some live ones."

We have here our usual assortment of villainy, heartlessness, crime and "the ultimate in boobery," represented by Mr. Business Revival.

How much would you give for this little child's chances, with fire in the rear, prohibition in front, bandits and bootleggers in waiting and a national Government busy in Europe?

Well, this is a strange world, and if this little mother and her offspring (real or adopted) don't know it, they are going to find it out.

Solid Men

Hard Workers.

GERMANS CULTIVATING FIELDS BY NIGHT

If Germany must fail in her efforts to pay the Allies all the money that they want, it will not be because Germany has not TRIED.

This picture helps to prove it. You see here German farmers, determined men working at night with tractors, plows, disc harrows going. One shift of men work all through the day, 12 hours, with a short stop for food. Then, other workers take their places on the tractors, and the work goes on all night, by artificial light.

American farmers will be interested in the German cultivating methods. On the left you see a tractor plowing the land, and on the right, traveling beside the tractor, another of a different type, disking, harrowing the earth that the plow has just turned over.

Working side by side, the men have company, although the noise of the tractors prevents their talking. And in case of trouble with either machine, there are two men to look after it.

As these Germans are working to meet the heavy taxes following their defeat in war and the demands of the Allies, so the Russians, to the east of Germany, are working with desperate energy at their "five-year plan."

It is not pleasant to think about, here in America, where we have become accustomed to taking things rather easily, but it is apparently A FACT that success, in the end, depends on HARD WORK.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

How, oh my Daughter, shall a damsel choose an husband?

* * *

For they come in assorted qualities and many patterns, even as beach pajamas. Yet, a woman's choice is limited to one at a time.

* * *

Behold, a damsel of Babylon came unto me, saying:

* * *

"Verily, verily, I would gladly wed. Yet, how shall I choose a mate?

"For lo, there are Four Men who are available. And one is a Thing of Beauty and a Charmer of Women; and another is a human Money Bag; and a third is a Thinker and a Genius; but the last is a Man of Character unto whom I can look UP. Yet, my heart is divided, and I know not mine own desire."

* * *

And I answer her, saying:

* * *

"Go to, my Daughter! I charge thee wed not an Adonis, lest thou be condemned to serve all the days of thy life as a human Picture Frame, and to dwell forever in fear and trembling. For she that marryeth a Chromo dreadeth not lest other women shall wrest him from her, and all her nights are peaceful and no one wrecketh her beauty sleep.

* * *

"Nay, if thou desirest a drawing-room ornament, get thee a Pomeranian, which is more swank and far less troublesome. For a thing of beauty is not always a joy—around the house.

"Above all, I charge thee, wed not a Genius; for these are the sons of Pan, who were made to love but never to marry. And a woman cannot subsist happily ALL her days upon visions and dreams and temperament and half-portions.

* * *

"For lo, when the bill-collector cometh in at the door, love flyeth out through the skylight. And what man can be wedded to an art, and at the same time devoted to a pay-envelope and a woman?

* * *

* * *

"For a poor man sometimes cleaveth unto his wife, because, having paid her bills, he hath neither the money nor the time left to seek other diversions. But he that hath four motor cars can take whatsoever route he chooseth, and his paths are beset with blondes and gold-diggers."

* * *

"Then," said the damsel, "there is but one man left which I may wed; even the man of Character, unto whom I can look UP!"

* * *

But I shook my head and answered her, saying:

* * *

"Even so. Yet, I charge thee, do all thy star-gazing BEFORE marriage. For after marriage, thou canst look up to any man only by standing at the foot of the stair!

* * *

"Yet, be not troubled concerning whom thou shalt marry. For, verily, like unto all the rest of women, thou shall wed that man who desireth to marry THEE!"

SCIENTIFIC PROBLEMS

By Archibald Henderson

Today the world is fortunate in having a great army of scientists at work, incessantly and in countries scattered all over the globe, engaged in discovering hitherto hidden laws and secrets of the universe. It is likewise extremely fortunate in having a number of scientists highly gifted with powers of exposition. Notable in any age would be such lucid expositors as Jeans, Eddington, Russell, Millikan and Shapley. These and other scientists explain, with brilliancy, clarity and skill, the most abstruse scientific problems, often making them immediately understood by the man in the street.

For instance, consider the tidal theory of Jeans, which is a development of the ideas worked out by the famous American scientists, Chamberlin and Moulton. These latter developed a theory known as the planetesimal theory. It was given a somewhat different and extended treatment by Sir James Jeans.

The Laplace theory, known as the nebular hypothesis, broke down because it was found, for one thing, that it takes two bodies, at least, to create the configuration of a central luminary around which planets revolve. A wandering star came close to the sun and pulled from it by gravitational attraction huge filaments of matter. What happened to these filaments? An actual study of this process, going on at this very time in remote parts of the universe, answers the question. These immense filaments drawn from the sun broke up, condensed into colossal drops—much as steam, in the open air, will condense into drops. The force at work in the formation of the solar planets, however, was gravitation only. These huge drops began to revolve around the sun, under the influence of gravity, and gradually took on a spherical or nearly spherical form.

The question is often asked whether life is exceedingly prevalent throughout the universe. A statistical study seems to indicate that life will occur in the universe where two bodies, acting gravitationally upon each other, form a solar system. This will happen when two bodies approach very near to each other, as in the tidal theory. This is so rare as to be almost negligible. It may be illustrated by imagining a room in which there were only three particles of dust! After a star has existed for millions upon millions of years, the chances against its being a sun surrounded by planets is about 100,000 to 1. The conclusion to be drawn, therefore, is that life is something very exceptional in the universe.

James Jeans was born in London in 1877. Educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, he there displayed proficiency as a mathematician, being second wrangler in 1898 and Smith's prizeman in 1900. He is well known in this country, having been professor of applied mathematics at Princeton from 1905 to 1909. Returning to England, he served as Stokes lecturer at Oxford. Again we find him as associate at Mt. Wilson Observatory in 1928. He is fellow and secretary of the Royal Society, received its Royal Medal in 1919, and was also awarded the Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society in 1922. On May 20, 1931, he was awarded the Franklin Medal of the Franklin Institue in this country for having done most during a single year to advance the knowledge of physical science or its applications.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

They're having trouble over in Italy, between the Fascist government and the Catholic Church. And in Russia, there's trouble between the Soviet government and the Church. Indeed, ever since men banded together in tribes and began making institutions for themselves, there has been this trouble. BUT YOU CAN'T KILL RELIGION.

You can't kill religion, because it isn't rooted in churches or creeds but in the very heart of every man. You can drive out the old forms and put in new ones, but, in the long run, it will amount to the same thing. For religion is an expression of the hunger and hope of the human heart, and that hunger and hope go on forever.

The Communists tried to kill religion. They said it was a bad thing for people—a "spiritual narcotic." So they looted the altars and wrecked the mosques, burned the crosses, broke the ikons, scattered the sacred bones of the saints in the street. Then, in place of the crosses, they erected red flags. In place of a creed, they drew up a Five Year Plan. And they have Something to take the place of those scattered saints. A dead man, carefully embalmed, lying under a glass in a room lighted by candles and hung with red like a shrine. Dead Lenin. Smiling in his sleep. Smiling, perhaps, because he has discovered how futile it is to try to kill religion.

For, in spite of all their efforts, religion isn't dead in Russia. It is thriving as never before . . . flaming in the heart of every student and worker. They don't call it "religion," of course. They call it "loyalty to Soviet principals." But they rally just as furiously and ecstatically around the red flags as they ever did around the crosses—they bend as reverently over the dead Lenin as they did before the saints. And they pour into their "Soviet loyalty" all that they have of honesty and decency, hard work, sacrifice, unselfishness, ambition, love and intelligence . . . and also all they have of bigotry, superstition, cruelty, intolerance, conceit and general cussedness. For that is the way with every religion—it expresses the secret springs of the heart, and the springs are muddy as well as crystal clear.

You don't drive religion out of human life. It is as much a part of their spirits as their bones are a part of their bodies. Always there is something in a man that cannot be content with material returns . . . that forever dreams and rebels and yearns . . . that must burn a candle and fight for a cause and bend before a shrine.

Study every man whom you meet and you will find that this is true. Every man has a religion—every man worships something. Sometimes it is only himself—but he'll worship himself with as much enthusiasm as though he were a dozen gods.

Don't try to destroy the religious impulse within yourself. Don't think it's silly to want to pray. Don't say it's childish to reach out for a hand in the dark. Don't sneer at those strange visions and faint calls that come and go in your heart. Accept your own religious nature and build upon it, for it is the most important thing in your life. You may have clever hands and a shrewd brain, but they will not determine your success or failure. You will be made—or marred—by that haunting hunger and hope in your own heart. You will be as great as your own religion. . . AS GREAT AS THE DEPTH OF YOUR HUNGER AND THE HEIGHT OF YOUR HOPE.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Music and Memory

The music weaves its vague enchantment here
Within the dimness of the lofty room,
Till once again I hear the lark's notes, clear
And high across the meadows sweet with bloom.
I see the white clouds drift and on wide slopes
The arabesques of shadow fleetly pass;
With restless fingertips the sunlight gropes
Among the thrusting, emerald blades of grass.

Now memory and music intertwine;
Through summer and the lark fled long ago,
Again loved notes, in these bright dreams of mine,
Go lilting up from flute and piccolo.
How strange, these wandering players have the key
To rooms I thought belonged alone to me!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

Do most of your home conversations end in angry statements?

If so are you not largely to blame?

You insist perhaps that every member of the family think as you do.

As long as unopposed you are genial, but opposed you are aroused to a belligerent state.

Why not encourage the family to think and formulate ideas?

Why should the ideas thus formed be exactly like yours?

Much may be learned and many interesting points brought out by a discussion in which each person is allowed to express his or her opinion.

Naturally if by so doing a quarrel always arises, those who might like to compare notes would cease to consider such a thing.

Personal matters they might be obliged to discuss with you, but the argument would be as short as possible if it were known that you are obstinate.

Even youngsters will present valuable thoughts if encouraged to talk around the family round table.

Don't be a czar and an unfair dictator in your home.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 3.—Thoughts while strolling: Tallulah Bankhead has changed. Not so flapperish. Cabaret sign: "Pop in and shed your morbidity." Mrs. Frank V. Storrs suggest Pocahontas. Soandsos who reply to a sweeping bow with a stiff little nod. And set you off talking to yourself.

Henry L. Doherty, a Columbus, O., boy, who made good in the city. Modernistic shops flooded with upward-shining electricity. Their marble pillars suggesting birches in the moonlight. Many say Samuel Seabury will be the next Mayor. Summer spats are sand-colored.

That new fashion designer, Schiaparelli, seems to be setting the style pace. Vest pocket shaving kits. Newsies who yell: "H'y're papes!" Burns Mantle and his daughter. Stores with cork and rubber flooring. Anything to deaden the city's scuff-scuff. What did they call dumbells in the Gay 90's?

Even the Flea Circus and shooting gallery next door merged. Wonder how a columnist could merge. The old Republic, where Warfield triumphed, now continuous burlesque. The graying Don Marquis. Cold cream smells to me as though it would be good to eat. Dave Leonard looks like Geo. Jean Nathan.

Venerable stage doormen tipping back in chairs. They say Harlem is to have a tabloid. A man who once fired me trips awkwardly off a bus and loses his hat. Says he, screaming merrily. What happened to all "The 400" bond salesmen? Nothing looks so snooty as a plunging locomotive.

Pink stomached puppies asleep, feet up in a dog shop window. Tom Noonan of the Chinatown missions. B. A. Rolfe resembles a banker in my home town. I can't keep from fooling with melting tallow in those candle-lit tea rooms. Freda Hempel. She likes to visit fortune tellers, they say.

Marshmallows in pink, blue and yellow. Eva Le Gallienne suggests a wan dream. And somehow I've long ached to poke John D., Jr., lightly in the ribs and inquire: "How goes it, old top?" After all, big shots must be fed up with constant deference.

* * *

Jeff Machamer tells of a customer entering the very British Fortnum and Mason store on upper Madison and asking for powder. "Which kind, madam," the "clark" inquired: "Face, gun, tooth or bug?"

* * *

The artist Ralph Barton, drifting out with the shadowy tide, created a distinct void in the ultra Bohemian life of the town. Talented and loving life, which he had lived to the fullest, his suicide was a distinct shock. I remember him best in the residence he established in the rue Nicolet in Paris a short while ago. Here with his beautiful and accomplished French bride he seemed to have reached a pinnacle of happiness. Yet before that summer waned into the cool of autumn, he was stirred by a sudden discontent. At first a pronounced Francophile he was becoming annoyed by the petty trials of French domesticity. One day on an hour's notice he was sailing for America.

* * *

A remembered feature of Barton's Paris quarters was his bedroom, completely swathed in jet black. Tortured by insomnia, he took this method of wooing sleep. The walls, the ceiling, the floor and every article in the room were of the same sombre hue. The only relief was in the ceiling where by touching a switch at the bedside would glow a splatter of electric stars.

* * *

Barton had a homemade motion picture which is today probably worth a fortune. Every visitor to his rue Nicolet home was included and was forced to carry out another scene in the mock continuity. Among notables featured with arrant fecundity when I saw it were Charles Chaplin, Henry L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Sacha Guitry and wife, Paul Robeson, the Prince of Wales, Anita Loos, John Emerson and many others.

* * *

The jauntiest suicide note I ever read was that of a Broadway weary chorus girl who left this note for her roommate in a shabby hotel and turned on the gas: "Over the river! If there's anything on the other side, I'll be seeing you."

* * *

I was pitchforked today into one of those sudden sidewalk pickpocket dramas. A man ahead of me clutched at a hip pocket and yelled "Thief!" And then reaching into an inside coat pocket cried: "No, here it is!" Being directly behind him I dashed into a store before he changed his mind again.
